Fish: 'I Have No Regrets'

By Hugh Reynolds

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Looking back on "that total pressure" of Watergate from the vantage point of a year away, Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr. says he would have done exactly the same thing: vote two articles of impeachment against a president of the United States.

Well, not exactly.

"I've been asked if I've had any regrets, if I would do anything different today than a year ago," Fish said. "I have no regrets. I'm proud of the way the (House Judiciary) committee conducted itself and its investigation."

"But I have changed my mind in one respect. Looking back, I would have voted for (instead of against) Article Three (of the proposed Articles of Impeachment against Richard Nixon).

Article Three accused Nixon of contempt of Congress for refusing to hand over tapes and documents subpoenaed by the Judiciary Committee for its impeachment investigation.

Article One dealt with obstruction of justice (the coverup itself) while Article Two dealt with abuse of power (Nixon's dealings with governmental agencies such as the CIA and FBI). Fish voted for both articles.

Fish said last week that his feeling at the time was that a contempt of congress citation "could not stand on its own."

A week after the three articles of impeachment were voted, Nixon released the famous "smoking gun" tape that revealed direct knowledge on his part of the Watergate break-in six days after it happened.

appearance, at least, of a double standard of justice."

Fish said that in the absence of a "full blown impeachment debate and trial by the senate and the absence of any trial by any court, the people deserve the facts." He said the special Watergate prosecutor will present those facts to the House Judiciary Committee in the near future.

The 25th District Republican stands opposed to changing either the impeachment process or giving the authority to the courts. "We are the only other people, except the president who are reelected by the people," Fish said in defending Congress' constitutional rights of impeachment. He also suggests that the process "should not be made easier."

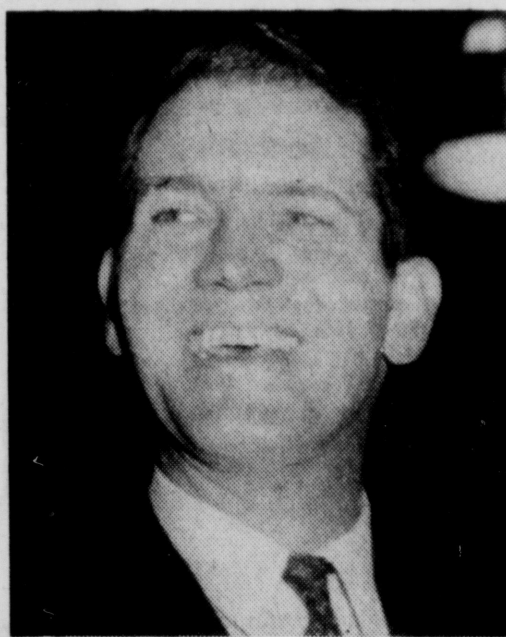

"It's just too important when you're dealing with a President," he said. "Impeachment is a very radical move. It's the undoing of an election. It's just too important when you're dealing with the President. It's a terribly difficult demanding process and I think the people deserve that."

Fish rejects those who say the articles of impeachment did not have the supportive evidence. "The evidence was overwhelming," he said. "If we had not come up with articles of impeachment we would have been saying that there was no presidential involvement. I think events have proven the correctness of our position."

These days, legislative life is perhaps less monumental for Fish but no less hectic.

"The life is quite different," he said. "It's back to the normal legislative duties of the (Judiciary) committee. We're quite busy, you know," he said rushing off to vote on the House floor.

Still there is no question that Watergate will always be with Hamilton Fish Jr. "There isn't a week that goes by someone stops me to tell me they think the system was helped immeasurably by the conduct of our committee. I hear this all the time and I think it stands for itself."

BONN (UPI) — President Ford arrived Saturday for a 10-day European tour and a controversial East-West summit he considers "a forward step for freedom."

Accompanied by Mrs. Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, Ford flew to the West German capital on the first leg of a five-nation, 13,000-mile diplomatic swing. The blue and white Air Force One touched down at 3:43 p.m. EDT (8:43 p.m. local time) after a seven hour flight from Washington.

Ambassador Martin J. Hillenbrand and Bonn's protocol chief, Franz-Joachim Schoeller, greeted the Fords at Bonn-Cologne airport and accompanied them on a quick helicopter flight to their overnight residence, a moat-circled chateau known as Schloss Gymnich.

A roll of drums greeted the President and Mrs. Ford as their car swept up to the castle, a combination of Gothic and rococo architecture. Torches were stuck in cracks of the wall around the moat and they flared, causing mysterious shadows to dance across the walls.

The President begins conferences with West German leaders today and leaves Monday for another preliminary stop in Warsaw.

Ford's welcome in Bonn was a low-key affair marked by strict, but discreet and unobtrusive, security precautions. Only about 200 persons clustered at an airport observance window to witness his arrival. West German television did not broadcast the arrival live and newspapers gave the story frontpage space without special ballyhoo headlines.

About 40 West German border guards, some with police dogs, guarded the approaches to the airport tarmac.

The Fords were spending a quiet evening at Schloss Gymnich, their guest residence for the two-day stay in West Germany.

But the main purpose of the trip — and the source of some domestic political criticism — is Ford's summit conference in Helsinki, Finland, beginning Monday with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and 33 other leaders of Western alliance and Soviet bloc nations.

They will sign a non-binding European security agreement which the Soviets regard as diplomatic confirmation of the East European bloc system they established after World War II. Ford and Brezhnev will also hold private discussions on further nuclear arms limitation, prospects for peace in the Middle East and other policy matters.

Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, other prominent politicians and representatives of East European ethnic groups claimed the Helsinki summit would in effect ratify Soviet domination of Eastern Europe, and their criticisms put Ford somewhat on the defensive.

"The outcome of this Helsinki conference remains to be tested," Ford said in a departure statement. "But whether it is a long stride or a short step, it is at least a forward step for freedom."

For undisclosed reasons, Ford omitted several lines from the official White House text of his departure remarks when he read them, including a pledge that "the United States has never recognized the Soviet incorporation of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia and is not going to do so in Helsinki."

Soviet troops occupied the three formerly independent Baltic States during World War II and they were added to the Soviet Union. Moscow is touchy about suggestions the three states might prefer independence and has dealt sternly with dissident movements that have cropped up there.

Ford's printed statement defended U.S. signature of the security accord on grounds "we are not committing ourselves to anything beyond what we are already committed to by our own moral and legal standards," but he dropped this line, too, when he read the statement.

The final accord of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe lays down 10 principles of international behavior, including renunciation of the use of force to settle disputes or change frontiers, and respect for human rights.

The Helsinki agreement is not a treaty and therefore not legally binding, but Ford said its principles "represent a moral commitment."

Turkish Takeover of U.S. Bases

Servicemen Remain On Job

KARAMURSEL, Turkey (UPI) — The Turkish armed forces assumed command of U.S. military bases in this country Saturday, but the move had little immediate effect on the day-to-day operation of the facilities used to monitor Soviet military movements.

U.S. officials said the Ankara government had made no move yet to expel the 6,000 American servicemen in Turkey despite the official announcement Friday that the two dozen U.S. bases on Turkish soil would be turned over to full control of the Turkish armed forces.

The takeover was ordered in retaliation for the failure of the U.S. House of Representatives Thursday to lift the arms embargo, imposed six months ago because of Turkey's use of American arms in invading Cyprus in July 1974.

In Ankara, the capital, Turkish Foreign Office spokesman Semih Akbil said, "The government's decision to turn over full control of the bases to the Turkish armed forces has been implemented since midnight Friday."

U.S. officials, however, said it would take at least several days before the effects of the Turkish takeover became apparent, and witnesses at the bases said American servicemen were carrying out their jobs as usual.

The officials said the bases are vital to America's defense because of their sophisticated surveillance facilities which monitor military movements in the Soviet Union and provide an early warning of a possible Soviet nuclear attack.

President Ford, in an effort to reverse the Turkish takeover, Friday asked Congress to reconsider lifting the arms embargo, but Rep. Thomas Morgan, chairman of the House International Relations Committee, said there was no chance of a rollback until September.

Ford's appeal was backed Saturday by Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield and Republican Senate Leader Robert Griffin of Michigan.

"I hope some way can be found to reconsider," Mansfield said.

He said the House action could lead Turkey to ask the Soviets for arms and the Arab states for the money to pay for them.

The only visible change Saturday at this Marmara Sea surveillance base in western Turkey was the absence of the stars and stripes from twin flag poles at the main entrance. The red-and-white Turkish star-and-crescent flag flew as usual.

American military police continued to share security duties with the Turks and an American father played baseball with his young family just inside the barbed wire perimeter.

Government officials said the Turkish armed forces took control of the radar base in Sinop, a peninsula jutting into the Black Sea, on Turkey's northern coast.

Investigation Continuing In Car-Pedestrian Fatal

TOWN OF ULSTER

Thirteen-year-old Diana Purdy of Wilbur died shortly after being struck by a car on Ulster Avenue Mall Friday night.

Investigation of the fatal car-pedestrian accident is continuing by the Ulster County Sheriff's Department. There have been no summonses issued.

Deputies said that Diana, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Purdy of 32 DeWitt Street, Kingston, was reportedly running across the newly widened four-lane highway in the vicinity of the Mayfair Theater and DeDe's Pharmacy at 9:30 p.m., Friday with two other girls.

Daniel Gallagher, 16, of Kingston, with two passengers in his car, was heading north and reportedly swerved to avoid hitting the first two girls, striking Diana.

She was taken to Benedictine Hospital by Doctor's Ambulance and pronounced dead on arrival.

Meanwhile, another serious accident involved William Ganter, 45, the former headmaster at Ulster Academy, who was in Kingston Hospital's intensive care unit in "serious" condition late Saturday after suffering extensive injuries while hiking up the treacherous "Devil's Kitchen" at Platt Clove in West Saugerties.

Ganter, who lives at the base of the hill at 2523 West Saugerties Road, and a companion were reportedly hiking up the mountain late Friday night when Ganter fell off a rock ledge "between 75 and 100 feet high," according to the Saugerties Ambulance Service, which later transported him to the hospital.

Apparently not aware of the extent of his injuries (later ascertained to be a skull fracture and a broken left arm and wrist), Ganter and companion made their way back to his home after the fall. His wife reportedly became concerned and called the ambulance. When attendants arrived, they convinced him to go to the hospital.

Crowds Greet Vols

TOWN OF ULSTER

For the fortieth year, volunteer firemen from all corners of Ulster County and beyond marched in uniform with resplendent engines and martial music Saturday as cheering spectators lined the march route.

The 40 separate fire organizations and 25 marching bands filed past a reviewing stand on Ulster Avenue Mall for more than two hours in the late afternoon sun, culminating a three-day affair that saw election of officers the night before at Spring Lake Firehouse, of the Town of Ulster Volunteer Firemen's Association, host to the affair.

The 40th Annual Ulster County Volunteer Firemen's Association Parade began at 4 p.m. at Harwich Street and proceeded north on the temporarily closed-off highway to its culmination at the Chambers Elementary School.

Convention activities actually began Thursday night with the annual association banquet.

Dutchess Closes Troubled Camp After Campers Ransack It

TOWN OF MILAN
A summer camp in Northern Dutchess County, which was investigated by a Freeman reporter earlier this month, has been closed down by the Dutchess County Health Department after the operators disappeared last week and some 100 unsupervised teenagers reportedly ransacked the property.

Assistant New York State

Attorney General Herbert Wallace said from his Poughkeepsie office Friday that he is investigating circumstances at the camp. He added, however, that authorities did not presently know the whereabouts of the camp's operators.

The camp is called Summer Stock Showcase, and is located in the Town of Milan, about eight miles north of Rhinebeck and three miles west of the Taconic State Parkway. It first opened in late June.

Shortly after the formal opening, several parents abruptly withdrew their children from the camp, claiming that conditions at the site were unsanitary. A Freeman reporter visited the camp the following day.

Michael Fitzmaurice, the camp founder and director, denied the parents' allegations and defended the facilities. "A few people decided the place wasn't good enough for their kids so they took them home," he said at the time, "now they want to get out of paying their bill." He added that just three children were removed from the camp, and that they were among the youngest (age 10-13) enrolled for the summer program.

"This is an investment for me," Fitzmaurice added, "It's not a one-shot deal. We'll be back next summer and the summer after that, so I'm not about to blow it. It really burns me that a couple of people are trying to give us a bad name."

Fitzmaurice apparently deserted the site early this week, for reasons unknown. When a Dutchess County Health Department official arrived at the Camp Tuesday for a routine inspection, he reportedly found the place in a shambles.

"One of my people who was out there said the place was a mess," Wallace told the Freeman, "the kids apparently ripped the place apart. He said the kitchen was sickening; food was poured all over the floor."

The health department closed the camp immediately, and contacted the Dutchess County Department of Social Services for assistance in contacting the parents of the teenagers. By Friday, all the children had been returned to their homes.

A spokesman for the health department said the camp's operators were about to be summoned to a hearing when they disappeared. Although the camp had been granted an operating permit, frequent inspections revealed that necessary repairs and renovations were not being made. The hearing was intended to determine whether the permit should be revoked.

The department official added that, at the time of the Freeman's inspection (in early July), the camp had been granted a license to operate and had been given time to meet the conditions stipulated in the permit.

When interviewed by the Freeman, Fitzmaurice said he considered the health department's demands to be "foolish," but he said the necessary work would be done to meet specifications. "We still have some things to do, but the important stuff is done," he said.

Wallace, who would not disclose details of his investigation, said Fitzmaurice and his partner, Lawrence Lind, were being sought. "We have their home addresses and their business address (both in New York City) and we have people out looking for them," said Wallace.

Summer Stock Showcase was billed as the only summer camp in the country devoted exclusively to theatrical instruction. The 100 youngsters attending the camp — most from New York City and Long Island who each paid $1,000 for the intended eight-week program — were to receive intensive instruction in various aspects of the theatre. Weekly summer stock productions were planned.

"The camp is completely closed now," said Wallace, "a lot of people have commented on what a good thing they were planning up there, but it hasn't worked out that way at all."

Westwood Operator Guilty on 48 Counts

KERHONKSON
William Nelson, operator of Camp Westwood in Kerhonkson last summer, has been found guilty of 48 counts of failure to pay his camp employees approximately $40,000 in 1974 in Rochester Town Court.

The jury trial, held last week, resulted in the conviction of the Flushing, Queens man on all charges, according to Attorney General Louis Lefkowitz's office in Albany.

The story began Aug. 23, 1974 when about 100 employees of the camp, ready to leave after a season's work, discovered that their promised summer pay was nowhere to be found. Neither was the camp operator, Nelson.

A dozen state police were called in to quell a potential civil disturbance resulting from the employees' concern, although no arrests in this connection were made. State Police Lt. Edward Minahan emphasized at that time that the situation was a civil matter, not a criminal one.

Co-director Sheldon Haas had been arrested by troopers several days before on charges of writing several thousand dollars worth of bad checks, and he was placed in Ulster County Jail in lieu of bail at that time. Haas subsequently explained before the Town of Rochester Court and Justice Harold Lipton that he wrote the checks to pay for camp expenses and was not privy to bookkeeping. The Ulster County DA's office dropped the matter when it became apparent, according to Paul Gruner of that office, that there was a "question as to whether a crime had been committed by him at all." Haas has since paid off some $15,000 in bad checks personally.

The jury trial last week before Justice Harold Lipton convicted Nelson. Sentencing has been set for Aug. 18 on Nelson, and bail was continued by the Rochester justice at $40,000. He could receive a sentence of up to one year on each of the 48 counts.

Lefkowitz's statement said investigation began after 43 college students, who worked as counselors and staff members at Camp Westwood filed complaints with his office.

The wages of almost $40,000 were owed to more than 100 employees of the children's camp. Lefkowitz charged that officials of the camp had disappeared Aug. 23, the date wages were due.

Robert McDougall of the attorney general's office in Albany noted that there is a provision in the law for Nelson to pay off all debts and fines and possibly escape his prison sentence, but that this option was strictly up to Lipton.

The jury also found the corporation which operated Camp Westwood — Camp Westwood, Inc. — guilty of the same 48 charges. Nelson is president of that corporation and, as such, is liable for any penalties handed down by the court.

The camp itself was most recently owned by the Den-Ceil Corp. of Ellenville, which was involved last year in mortgage foreclosure proceedings. Kingston attorney George A. Beck was appointed receiver. Neither Den-Ceil Corp. or the receiver are liable for any wrongdoing that Nelson might have committed while he leased the camp.

File N-Plant Application

WASHINGTON
The New York State Power Authority (SPA) has filed an application with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) for a construction permit to build a 1.2 million kilowatt nuclear power plant at Cementon in Greene County.

The application, together with the SPA's environmental report, was submitted to the NRC on Friday. The preliminary safety analysis report on the plant will be filed later.

The plant is planned to generate electricity for use of public agencies, including mass transit in the New York metropolitan area, and for the SPA's municipal system and rural electric cooperative customers throughout the state.

Prime site for the plant is an industrial district about a mile north of the hamlet of Cementon and 40 miles south of Albany. An alternate site is at Athens, about 10 miles further north.

The plant will use a pressurized water reactor manufactured by Babcock and Wilcox. The proposed plant design incorporates a closed-cycle cooling system which will limit the amount of water withdrawn from and returned to the Hudson River.

Detailed environmental and engineering studies of the two sites began more than two years ago.

The plant is scheduled for operation in 1983.

Trip For Handicapped

STONE RIDGE
The Recreation Association for the Handicapped and Handicapped in Action will sponsor a trip to the Summer Music Theatre at Ulster County Community College, Thursday to view "The Music Man." Transportation will be provided.

Other recent outings have included a social evening at the YWCA, Stone House Day in Hurley, and the Clyde Beatty-Cole Brothers Circus, as guests of Kingston Kiwanis.

In August a trip is planned to Jungle Habitat in West Milford, N.J.

Contributions may be sent to Diana Geiger, vice president of RAH, in care of Ulster County Association for Mental Health, 27 East O'Reilly St., Kingston.

Special Meeting

ROSENDALE
A special meeting of the Rosendale Town Board has been called for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, July 30 at the town clerk's office, Main Street, Rosendale.

The meeting was called in reference to a petition submitted with signatures of 150 town residents calling for a change in the assessor system.

Children's Rehab . . . Loving Philosophy

By Jon Powers

KINGSTON

In the eyes of Mrs. Eve O'Reilly, there's no such thing as an abnormal child. A few simply have problems — speech, hearing, behavioral or motor handicaps — that can be overcome with a healthy dose of attention, training and love.

It is, perhaps, that particular philosophy that marks the Children's Rehabilitation Center as something quite special. Devoted to caring for the community's most neglected citizens — children who often can't adequately express their fears, frustrations and anxieties in terms comprehensible to their elders — the center is completing its first quarter century with the realization that there are more obstacles, more challenges, to surmount.

Mrs. O'Reilly has been the center's nursery school teacher for the past 16 years; has weathered crises that would have daunted a less resolute person; has seen her problem-prone charges shed paranoid and private burdens that threatened to stifle their future development; has maintained a sense of humor and detached compassion that helps place success and failures in their proper perspective.

"My job is to make the children right, to make them ordinary," she says. "When they leave here, we want them to be nice, socially acceptable people."

In a time when conformity itself is regarded by some as a social aberration, Mrs. O'Reilly's insistence on uniformity might raise some eyebrows. But for the youngsters who attend the Children's Rehabilitation Center, even a few tentative steps toward normalcy is a significant achievement. And, after all, they still have an entire lifetime to become as weird, as hung-up — as extraordinary — as the rest of us.

All the children who attend the center's nursery classes suffer from some emotional or physical handicap. Most have speech problems, several suffer physical handicaps such as cerebral palsy, a few display behavioral or disciplinary problems that likely stem from an emotional disturbance.

And all of the children are pre-schoolers, between the ages of 2 and 5. It is the center's goal to prepare each for the normal social interactions that will take place when they attend a public school; to help remove the scars of mental and physical distress that set them noticeably apart from their peers.

"We try to teach them how to behave decently," said Mrs. O'Reilly, "how to socialize with their peers. Just about every naughty child is an unhappy child. If we can find out why they are unhappy, and correct that problem, their behavior will improve noticeably."

It is accepted that many handicapped children have behavioral problems that can be traced directly to whatever physical or emotional ailment they are suffering. Their misbehavior, however, only serves to emphasize that handicap in the eyes of the other children. Correct that problem — or at least help the child to recognize its existence — and the youngster is able to establish at least a more comfortable relationship with his peers. It's one thing to accept the validity of a theory, but quite another thing to put it into practice. That's Mrs. O'Reilly's job.

"We've had some failures, but I don't like to think of them as failures," she said. "I just don't believe that we could work with a child for three or four months and not make some impression on him. We may not accomplish everything that we'd like, but I do think that we accomplish something with every child."

There is nothing terribly complicated about the classes that Mrs. O'Reilly conducts at the center. Held three hours a day, five days a week (with some children attending more than one day a week), they emphasize proper and acceptable social relationships. The children are encouraged to work together, play together, respect the property and privacy of their classmates, and make new friends. In short, they're given a helpful headstart on the same classroom situation they'll encounter at school.

And when one of the children wanders from the accepted norm — an inevitable occurrence — Mrs. O'Reilly is there to gently, but firmly, set the transgressor straight.

She has her own theories on how best to instruct her impressionable, yet determinedly independent, students: "See like a child and not like a parent. Put yourself in their position and approach them from their own level. You don't need a great deal of patience, just love and affection."

When they leave the nursery, most of the children are capably equipped to handle the conflicts and traumas that are a natural part of growing up. But not all of the miracles are accomplished in Mrs. O'Reilly's classroom.

The center, located on property donated by Benedictine Hospital, contains fully equipped therapy rooms for cerebral palsy patients and other youngsters afflicted with muscular problems and physical handicaps, audio-visual testing rooms and a speech clinic. A psychologist, physical therapist, speech pathologist and orthopedic consultant — as well as a number of adult and teenaged volunteers — work with the children every day to help correct problems that, if left untreated, would linger through adulthood.

With some guidance from volunteer aide Joyce Dillon, young Kimberly Cortez creates shapes and ideas from mounds of clay, a prelude to more energetic activities she'll undertake in a normal classroom.

HOW TO Build your own Retirement Plan and qualify for a Tax Deduction

a professional man, doctor, lawyer, architect, store owner or dealer — you are eligible. You can deduct up to 15% a year, to a maximum of $7500, from your taxable earned income every year until you retire. Your money is held at interest while it accumulates and you pay no income tax on principal or interest until you retire. By that time you will undoubtedly be in a lower tax bracket.

IF YOU ARE NOT COVERED by a retirement plan where you work, you can deduct 15% of your annual earnings, up to $1500 a year, from your income tax each year. Held at interest by Rondout, you are building a constantly growing retirement fund of your own — and both interest and principal are tax-free until you retire.

FOR COMPLETE DETAILS

on either of these retirement plans, stop in or call our Mr. Kolano at Rondout Savings. And remember: nobody pays a higher rate of interest than Rondout Savings!

The Finns, on Short Notice, Will Have Helsinki Readied

HELSINKI, July 27 (UPI) — The Finns will keep their promise and have all the necessary equipment installed for the European security conference summit by the time it begins July 30. Whether there's time to test the equipment beforehand is another matter.

And there are a lot of angry nongovernment people who wish the conference had stayed in Geneva.

The Finns asked four weeks notice but got little less than three. Their original plans called for installation of equipment in three weeks and testing in the fourth. They have been working 24 hours a day to cut down the schedule.

Hotels, never knowing when the summit would come, were fully booked with foreigners. The Foreign Ministry issued orders canceling all hotel reservations beginning July 26 and lasting in some cases for nine days.

Film actress Elizabeth Taylor, for instance, loses her suite at a top hotel she visits almost weekly from filmmaking in Leningrad.

International conferences which were planned months ago have had to be moved elsewhere in the city. A pharmacologists convention of 4,500 delegates will be held at the city ice rink, but the delegates just squeezed within the hotel deadline.

Not so lucky is the International Society of Blood Transfusion whose Finland House convention was to begin July 27. More than 1,000 delegates from 32 countries had hotel rooms booked. The Foreign Ministry unbooked them.

A Finnish Red Cross spokesman said she hoped doctors throughout the city would allow the delegates to stay at their homes. A nearby technical college offered convention space.

All of this unbooking of hotels and conventions does little for Finland's international reputation, as tourist officials quickly point out. But the loss of reputation is something the government is willing to accept.

The security conference has been at the forefront of their foreign policy for six years. They helped initiate the conference, they paid the entire cost of the eight months of preparatory talks which began in 1972, and for the last two years they have waited not always patiently for the summit.

That it should occur in summer when Helsinki is at its best and security is easier does not hurt any.

The Finns are also lending a helping hand to make the city look better.

Helsinki, capital of Finland since 1812, is in any case one of the cleanest capital cities in Europe.

Located on the Gulf of Finland, the city is almost surrounded by water. Winds from the gulf keep the city fresh and temperatures down in the 70s Fahrenheit in summer.

About 500,000 people reside in the city, but in summer that number is halved as Finns take their annual vacations, usually at lakeside cottages.

The security conference planners have been working in recent weeks to improve the appearance of the conference site itself.

From the front, Finlandia House appears as a statuesque white-marbled monument to its designer, Alvar Aalto, the most famous living Finnish architect. But from the back it's a mess.

The backyard is a graveyard for many of the state railway's unused wagon cars. A long-range plan calls for moving the graveyard out of Helsinki. For the summit short range, soldiers are working hard pulling up some of the track.

In its place will go an extension of the parking lot for the delegates cars.

The entire building — inside and out — has been cleaned. Rolled grass has been strategically placed, along with masses of blue and white flowers in gigantic pots. Some small pine trees were planted.

At the airport, a new VIP lounge was built. The 13-mile road to the airport was repaved.

And police intend that, at least for that one week, a common sight in the city shall disappear. Orders have been issued to round up the drunks.

Warmth for Ford Awaits in Warsaw

WARSAW (UPI) — Thousands of Poles feel a close link to the United States because of the huge number of Polish emigres living there.

They demonstrated their sense of kinship when 250,000 persons turned out in 1972 to welcome former President Richard M. Nixon on the first visit to Poland by an American President.

A similar enthusiastic greeting may await President Ford when he comes here next week.

Government and Communist party leaders will join in the warm welcome to Ford as a sign of the steady improvement in Polish-American relations since the Nixon visit.

Poland is facing an economic struggle at the moment. Food shortages, which helped topple Wladyslaw Gomulka in 1970 and brought current party leader Edward Gierek to power, are cropping up again.

Gierek has based his policy of raising the standard of living to a large degree on increasing exports to the West to finance purchases there.

But inflation could slow this program. And the Soviet Union's recent action in doubling oil prices charged to its East European partners has produced an additional strain on the Polish economy.

Gierek is expected to raise with Ford the question of increasing Polish exports to the United States and of getting additional American credits.

Polish-American trade is forecast to reach $1 billion by the end of this year, a 400 percent increase since 1971. It is projected to hit $2 billion by 1981.

But Poland has a large deficit in its trade with the United States.

The U.S. Export-Import Bank has granted Poland large-scale credits and the nation's most modern meat-processing plants have been built with such loans.

The economic relationship between Poland and the United States has grown since the Nixon visit and Gierek's own visit to the United States last year.

A U.S. trade information office opened in Warsaw after Nixon came here. Eighty American firms took part in the international technical fair at Poznan last month and more already have signed up for next year's fair.

Gierek on his trip to Washington signed agreements on industrial and technological cooperation and a pact that calls for doubling trade between the two countries by 1980.

Cultural relations also have grown. Warsaw was one of three European capitals to which the United States recently sent its traveling exhibition, "The World of Franklin and Jefferson," marking the 200th anniversary of the United States. Warsaw movie theaters also have begun showing an increasing number of American films.

Nixon Set Mark In Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — President Ford on his visit to Yugoslavia next month may be hard put to top the turnout President Nixon drew in 1970.

Nixon was the first U.S. chief executive to pay an official visit to Yugoslavia and the nation responded with one of the most impressive welcomes ever given a foreign visitor.

President Ford is still treated by Yugoslav news media very much as a stopgap President and among ordinary Yugoslavs has not yet become a clearly established personality.

At an official level, however, Ford's trip shows all the signs of being a considerable success.

After several thorny patches in the past four years, U.S.-Yugoslav relations have improved steadily in the past 15 months.

Mutual trade has grown particularly rapidly over the past two years and in one of several major agreements, Westinghouse won the contract to build Yugoslavia's first nuclear power plant.

Most important for the Yugoslavs is that Yugoslav-U.S. trade is very well balanced.

Yugoslav officials have emphasized this to their major Western trading partner, the nine-nation European Common Market, with which they are running a growing trade deficit.

On the political side, greater differences exist.

Yugoslavia has been a very vocal critic of U.S. foreign policy — particularly in the Middle East and Southeast Asia. As a leading member of the nonaligned group of nations, it also firmly supports the efforts of the developing world to change its relationship with the developed world.

Positive Step Taken for 209

By Tim Schuster

A positive step forward in the locally initiated plan to upgrade Route 209 has been taken by the regional office of the Department of Transportation in sending its final environmental impact statement to the federal government for signing.

Alan Bloom of the Poughkeepsie DOT office confirmed that this first federal requirement had been fulfilled for the 27-mile corridor from Spring Glen to Hurley.

Included in that section, according to Bloom, is the top priority, seven-mile section to by-pass Ellenville, considered the "most important" segment. The DOT must hold a public design hearing on that phase of work. That hearing will present, for the public, a plan on property acquisition and will detail the route around the village.

One concern the state DOT has been dealing with is the additional federal requirements imposed as time goes on, complicating the progression of necessary steps before any work can begin, he added, noting that it is considered premature to allocate any funds at this stage.

Representatives of Congressman Matthew McHugh's office and Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey met with DOT Regional Director Nicholas Sinacori April 18 on Route 209 and were given the following tentative schedule, described by McHugh's aide Marvin Rappaport as the minimum possible tie. It totals more than four years before actual construction could begin.

The first was a consultant reevaluation, 18 months; then a revised environmental impact statement, four months; a review by the Federal Highway Administration, six months; and concurrent 33-month plans for property acquisition and 24-month design status.

And representatives of McHugh's and Hinchey's office will meet with State Transportation Commissioner Raymond Schuler sometime during the next two months in an effort to expedite proceedings. The DOT had been awaiting a court decision, overturning a previous circuit court decision, which would allow environmental impact statements to be done by the state instead of the federal government. That hurdle has been cleared.

It was confirmed by the DOT's regional office that the numerous traffic counters seen on Route 209 and feeder roads this month were part of the continuing study for project development.

Remarks from some other interested local persons: Eugene Houck, county legislator from Ellenville, has also been privy to the DOT schedule and said construction of the Ellenville by-pass could not begin before 1980. He said the next stage was planning the corridor. "I feel there is some hope for progress now," said Houck, one of four county legislators to sponsor a March 6, 1975 resolution appealing for priority action to the state. The others were Louis Resnick, George Barthel, and Robert Kuhlmann.

Modris Pukulis, Ellenville village manager, said a letter from the DOT had been received several weeks ago indicating that action on the 209 by-pass was "still five or six years away," if all goes smoothly.

Louis Resnick, who with Houck was also present at Sinacori's briefing in April, said he had been with the issue "15 or 20 years" including the past ten or so with the Route 209 Association.

Hinchey noted that when he took office the Route 209 project was "at the bottom." He and no panacea for pushing the project other than to say, "The only thing we can do is try to keep the pressure up." He did not see the possibility of another transportation bond issue emanating from Albany in the foreseeable future, due to depressed economic conditions.

If and when the project reaches the funding stage, if it has been assigned a high priority, money would come from the DOT budget for that year.

And what of that $2 billion released by President Ford in federal highway funds this spring?

"I wouldn't count on that," said Marvin Rappaport. "That $2 billion has already been spent."

Budget Cutbacks Obscure Visibility

Heavy rains, hot weather and budget cutbacks have resulted in some high grass along state-maintained highways such as shown here at Route 209 as it comes into Route 9W (south) near Caldor's Plaza. State officials say their grass trimming force of six mowers has been cut to one by Albany. (Freeman photo).

Arm-Twisting

Political allegiance is an accepted fact for most municipal employees; after all, the administration giveth and the administration can taketh away, but the extremely unsubtle manner which the Koenig Reelection Committee has adopted deserves some comment here. Since the mayor is limited under the new campaign financing laws to a total of about $7,000, and 140 tickets have been printed at $50 apiece, it looks as though this one little dinner at the Walnut Grove will provide the necessary funds for Koenig's fourth try at the mayoralty. What is dismaying are the circumstances under which the tickets have been distributed. Many city employees received two tickets in the mail without even the usual amenity of an accompanying letter of appeal. The message seemed clear—ante up the $50 per ticket. Now this is an arbitrary and dictatorial approach that is completely devoid of any spirit of volunteerism. It smacks of arm-twisting on a selected group, regardless of their ability to pay.

Unrealistic

Britain's Prime Minister Harold Wilson was pleading recently with the nation's coal miners, asking them to restrain their wage demands, which go as high as an increase of 98 per cent.

That makes the wage increase of nearly 30 percent recently granted by the Labor government to the railroad workers seem modest by comparison.

Unreasonable wage demands such as these have fueled Britain's runaway inflation (now at an annual rate of 25 percent), undermined the value of the pound, weakened the competitive position of British industry in world markets and caused unemployment in Britain to rise sharply.

The Labor government thought it had a social contract with the British working man which assured restraint in wage demands in return for assurance of price stability. That contract, if it ever existed, has been broken repeatedly with the consent of the government.

The result is economic chaos and social injustice. High wage increases have tended to redistribute personal income to the advantage of the highly organized workers and to the disadvantage of the middle class, which is suffering most from the inflation.

Britain will muddle through. But America must take care not to go that way. Labor leaders who refuse to be realistic in their demands for catchup wage increases must not be allowed to rock the economic boat for the rest of us.

Berry's World

"Dear, I forget! What is it you always say I am — 'emancipated' or 'emasculated'?"

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The man who stopped the CIA from tampering with the mails, it is now alleged, actually helped the CIA cover up the illegal operation and misled Congress in the bargain.

He is William Cotter, the chief postal inspector, who first began dealing with the Post Office in the 1950s as a CIA agent opening other people's mail.

After he was put in charge of enforcing the postal laws on 1969, he allegedly promised a CIA officer that he would not interfere with the illegal mail openings without first consulting the CIA.

True to his promise, he never told his postal superiors about the mail-opening project. But when the heat was on, Cotter asked the CIA to clear the operation with his postal bosses. The CIA refused, so Cotter belatedly stopped the mail openings to save his own skin.

These charges have been made by Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Calif., in a private letter to Postmaster General Benjamin Bailor. Wilson, whose subcommittee has been investigating the mail-opening scandal, asked Bailor to fire Cotter.

In calling for Cotter's removal, Wilson charged that "his dedication is first and foremost to the CIA, not the Postal Service."

Cotter also misled Congress, according to Wilson, about his knowledge of the mail openings. The chief inspector swore he had "no official awareness" of the mail surveillance since he left the CIA project in December 1955. "The Rockefeller Report reveals that this assertion is false," wrote Wilson.

He bluntly told the Postmaster General that "the contradictions in Mr. Cotter's testimony should be of some concern to you."

Wilson noted that Cotter continued to conceal the mail openings even after he had received inquiries "from American scientists." Not until 1973, nearly four years after he became the chief inspector, did he halt the illegal operation.

Meanwhile, he was more concerned about concealing the CIA's law violations than enforcing the law.

Footnote: Ironically, Cotter is now pursuing a marginal mail-opening case with uncharacteristic zeal. This involves a reporter, however, rather than the CIA.

Brian Kanzaki recently wrote in the Queens College, N.Y., newspaper that a student leader allegedly had used student funds to make personal, long-distance phone calls. The student leader charged that the story was based on phone records illegally obtained from her mail.

She called in the postal inspectors who threatened Kanzaki with prosecution if he didn't tell them where he got the phone records. These are the same inspectors who ignored the opening of millions of letters by the CIA.

HOUSING HASSLE: Most political experts expected the new, Democratic-dominated Congress to push President Ford around this year.

There were widespread predictions at the first of the year that the President was but a weak, uncertain dog who would be wagged by a powerful congressional tail.

Instead, the President has shown a remarkable ability to manipulate Congress. This was illustrated, for example, during the great hassle over housing. Confidential White House minutes show how the President got the housing legislation he wanted out of Congress.

Just before he vetoed the housing bill, he called Republican congressional leaders to the White House for a strategy session. He asked Carla Hills, the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, to give them a rundown on the housing crisis.

"Last year," she told them bluntly, "was not a good year for housing." Although more housing permits were issued in April than March, she said, "even so they were down 30 per cent from a year ago." She also reported that "delinquencies are up."

Nevertheless, she criticized the Democratic housing bill for

By William F. Buckley

In a recent visit exchange, the author of the best-selling Breach of Faith made some interesting observations. Theodore White, by the way, has seen his name number one on the best-seller list more weeks than any other author, living or dead. This time around is his 13th as Number One, so he has carved out for himself, whatever his political views, a niche in Guinness's Book of Records.

I raised with him a point I have myself not previously meditated, nor seen meditated elsewhere. What are the obligations of an author toward his critics? The question was prompted by a dyspeptic column (alas, there are few which can otherwise be characterized) by Garry Wills, who learned that this time around, Theodore White, a liberal who made the mistake the far-literary left will never forgive him for, namely to write that Richard Nixon is a member of the human species who has not only weaknesses, but strengths (Garry Wills said as much before he was radicalized by the kids in 1968).

For such a blunder, the hard humorless left is unforgiving. . . so when the galleys of his book came out, he instructed his publisher not to send out a set of the New York Review of Books, which is a bookish fortnightly accumulation of a broad spectrum of neuroses about the world at large. In practical terms, all this means is that the magazine could not dump on White's new book on publication day, lacking the lead time necessary. So they had to go out to the book store, buy a copy, and dump on White in the next issue, which they did. Asked whether this was a form of censorship, as charged by the loose-thinking Mr. Wills, Mr. White replied that he could get as fair a hearing from the New York Review of Books as a Jewish freedom-fighter could get from a Nazi court.

I sympathize with him because the NYRB owns a spite-sheet called the Virginia Kirkus Review of Books, which is substantially devoted to the task of dissuading book buyers, in advance of a book's appearance, from stocking a book by any conservative writer. On the same day I visited with Mr. White, I received my 14th straight dump from Virginia Kirkus, describing a forth-coming volume as you and I might describe a collection of essays from Pravda.

Fortunately, Kirkus is not taken seriously by the majority of bookbuyers, as sales of Mr. White's books readily attest and, for that matter my own.

Still, it had never occurred to me to be so inventive as to deprive the NYRB of the lubricant for its guillotine, and I rejoice in my discovery of the author's trivial little authority to retaliate against the mastodons who like to mangle the work of their opponents and hang it high on a telegraph pole to scare off like-minded men, in the tradition of the bandit chiefs of revolutionary Mexico.

A second point. Mr. White professes with great frequency, his "respect for the Presidency." It is perhaps the principal thesis of his book that Nixon fell because he undermined the highest secular ideal in this country, namely the respect the people feel for the President.

I have run across that phrase throughout my lifetime, as of course all of us have; but I found myself, in my iconoclastic mood, wondering just why? All men are sinners. But the chances that you are a sinner rise proportionately as you achieve high political office: that is generally true.

A man who achieves the presidency is much likelier to be dominated by ambition than a man who does not, and people who are seized by ambition tend to be less attractive than those who are not. A man who achieves the presidency tends to be ruthless, rather than considerate and loyal. So I found myself saying that I respect the president only in the sense that I respect a locomotive engine, i.e., it is a good idea, unless you are very agile, or, better still, another locomotive engine, to get out of the way.

A thought for the day. But come to think of it, a better one than one is likely to run into in a typical day, which attests to the fact that it is not only presidents who are arrogant.

costing too much for too little. The President agreed it should be vetted.

"We are told," warned Secretary Hills, "there are difficulties in sustaining a veto."

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., confirmed this. "We would be hard put," he said, "to sustain a veto in the Senate." But he added slyly: "I would hope for success from our gallant friends in the House."

"Once more into the breach, dear friends!" mocked House Republican leader John Rhodes.

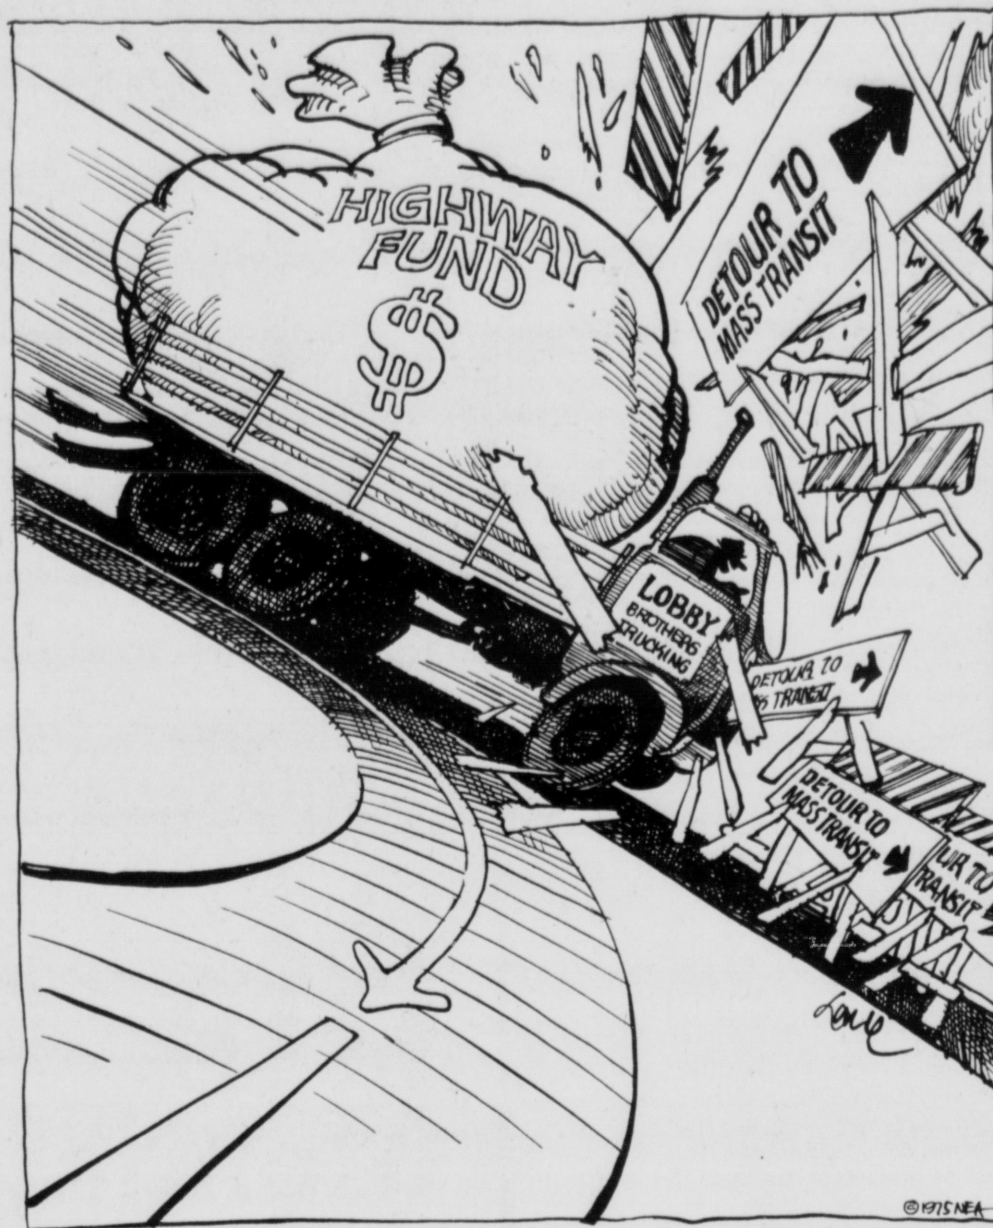

"Even if we sustain a veto, what have we got?" demanded Rep. Garry Brown, R-Mich. "They'd come up with a mortgage relief program. Our best hope is a substitute . . .

"Before a veto message," he appealed to the President, "please put in place your substitute to help us hold our friends in line."

"The substitute bill should hold out some carrots," suggested Rep. Albert Johnson, R-Pa.

The President agreed and submitted a substitute bill before the ink on his veto message was dry. And once again, he got his way with Congress.

Nicholas Von Hoffman:

WASHINGTON — Last year the Federal Reserve System spent $8,204 to move one of its employees the long distance from Jacksonville, Fla., to Atlanta, Ga.

The Fed has assets of almost $114 billion, mostly in the form of U.S. Government securities on which you and I pay the Fed nearly $6 billion a year in interest. It is these profits which permit the Fed to be so understanding about moving expenses; they also enable the Fed to escape going to Congress for an annual appropriation as every other part of our government — even the meenie-pooes of the CIA — must do.

The Fed spends as it pleases and answers questions about itself only when it cares to. In addition to its wealth and profits, this agency also handles transactions totaling over $30 trillion a year, and all of this happens without an outside audit. The Pentagon is subject to outside audit, the White House is subject to outside audit, but the Fed audits itself and asks us to take its word for its honesty, frugality and sagacity.

Recently that marvelous, old-time Texas Fed fighter, Rep. Wright Patman, has had his staff look into how this unique agency spends the public's money running itself. In the last decade the Fed's expenses have gone up almost 200 percent to a total of close to $600 million. (The profits the Fed doesn't spend on itself are turned in to the Treasury.)

Here are a few amusing items. Last year the New York Federal Reserve Bank spent $4,749 for office Christmas decorations. It also spent $9.67 for bowling score sheets, $1,372 on membership dues to the Council of Foreign Relations, $123,073 on American Airlines tickets and $119.32 on golf fees. The Louisville branch of the St. Louis Fed blew

$1,226 on booze and dinner for 19 people. Houston treated itself to a $2,172 luncheon. The Chicago Fed found a way to spend $122,000 recruiting new employees, while the larger New York Bank said it could do the same job for under $10,000. Given the thousands and thousands of dollars in bills the Fed piled up on jewelry, flowers, limousines, parties and other forms of recreation, you wouldn't imagine they'd have to spend anything on recruitment.

Fed employees even have two pension plans. A regular government type and something called the Thrift Plan, a mutual fund to which the agency has generously contributed more than $10 million from 1970 when it was begun to the end of 1974. Last year the Fed kicked in another $270,000 for athletic activities and to the Federal Reserve Clubs which put on picnics, parties and other fun activities for Fed chairman Arthur Burns' overworked and underpaid employees.

If, in a private business, the stockholders want to spend their money that way, there would be no reason to take exception. What is eyebrow lifting here is that the Fed is a public agency operating as though it were a private one. That is exactly what some of the opponents of the original Federal Reserve Act back in 1913 predicted would happen. No, President Wilson assured them, the law "provides for public instead of private control, thus making the banks what they should be — servants and not the masters of business . . . With government control, there is created a force which, while it will not attempt to run the business of the banks, will be clothed with some authority to prevent injustice from the banks to the general public. Under the proposed plan, recognition is given the interests of the people, and there is established the principle of some other control of credit than arbitrary control by the banks . . . This is a great principle."

It is also a dead one. The hundreds of thousands of dollars the Patman staff report shows the Fed spends on pouring Scotch over the rocks is less important than the evidence demonstrating the degree to which the banking industry can get what it wants from the Fed. Why, for example, would the Fed provide the banking industry with $47 million worth of free armored car service? More millions are being spent by the Fed to develop automated currency handling equipment for industry. Aren't these the ordinary costs of doing business which every private enterprise can be reasonably expected to bear for itself?

The Patman report also raises the question of some very gross sorts of conflict of interest in the Fed's hiring of compromised persons as consultants from the banking industry and its professional apologists in the universities. Beyond that kind of garden variety whorishness, we have officers of the Federal Reserve personally owning more than $100 million worth of stocks while making official decisions which can affect their price on every stock exchange in America. Lastly, there is the question of the Fed's using its power to make the banks bail out failing, inefficient and possibly corrupt corporations. Junk socialism to save the rich and the stupid from the consequences of their own business incompetence. Without an outside audit these practices can't be prohibited; they can't even be properly detected and understood. The Fed needs a lot of fundamental new legislation besides a compulsory outside audit, but Mr. Patman's bill to make the Fed show its books is a necessary beginning to give us what Woodrow Wilson said would be ours 62 years ago.

Campaign Fund Raising—The Consequences of Sophistication

TICKET TIME—We don't look for a great outpouring of public outrage over the mayor's fund-raising methods, revealed in Thursday's Freeman.

Kingstonians are very blasé about these things. So what if the mayor's fund-raising methods, revealed in Thursday's Freeman.

Kingstonians are very blasé about these things. So what if the mayor's putting the arm on city workers for $50 a ticket—double if you're unfortunate enough to be married. Where else is he supposed to get the money? ... That's politics.

And so it goes. One guy, rather closely associated with the "Koenig Reelection Committee" made quite a case for a city worker's "obligation" to the mayor for his or her job. "People should understand," this fellow said, "that when they take these kinds of jobs that there are certain obligations. They should expect to give something back now and then."

The same logic would seem to hold true for vendors and contractors doing business with the city. "Giving something back" is another way of saying "kickback" but then again we're all sophisticated people and we understand that that's the way things are. Right?

There are a few things that could bear closer scrutiny, however.

First of all, city workers do not work for the mayor. They work for the taxpayers as indeed so does the mayor. As movie stars are prone to say when their privacy is threatened, all they owe the city (the administration?) is a good performance/a good day's work. There's something else worth looking at: why do Frank Koenig's reelection campaigns cost so much money? After all, it is Kingston, not New York City, and Frank is the incumbent and he does campaign all year long, hitting as many as half a dozen dinners in any weekend, so why all the loot?

Keep in mind that $7,000 may only be the half of it. There's been published reports that Koenig's campaigns have exceeded $10,000 and nobody's denied it.

What we have here is a potentially explosive combination, the combination of extremely expensive campaigns—largely self-imposed because we can find no logical reason why an incumbent has to spend that kind of money—and the attitude that anyone who makes a living from the administration has an "obligation" to financially support it. The situation at city hall is like being a little bit pregnant; it doesn't figure to improve with time.

But then again, we're all very sophisticated about things like that.

POLY-BIG—One of the more interesting side shows in this fund raising fiasco is

City Beat

By Hugh Reynolds
Freeman City Hall Reporter

And despite the fact that Gallo is sometimes characterized as something of a tag-along at Koenig's victory parties, he does have a rather large and loyal following. And they're none too happy that the old "Committee to Reelect Koenig-Gallo" has gone the way of the dodo.

Maybe Frank doesn't need Bobby anymore. Rumor has it he's already looking to his fifth term. Will success spoil Frank Koenig?

Speaking of Gallo, wasn't it interesting to see a Conservative challenge against him? Gallo, most will recall, left them in the aisles at the Conservative convention with his anti-fluoridation speech.

Then they turn around and primary him. One has to wonder just what these Conservatives stand for, if anything.

CITY BITS—One of the nicer things about writing stories about former Mayor John Schwenk is that the former mayor always writes back with his point of view.

We're not being facetious in saying that; we like to get both sides.

Last week we did a story on city finances where we compared the amount of money budgeted for debt with the overall budget comparing "Schwenk's" $480,000 in debt service against a less than three million budget to Koenig's $535,000 against an eight million dollar budget.

Schwenk, in his note to us, didn't take exception to those figures, but he did take exception to a column concerning "balance of power" between the legislative and executive branch where we pointed out that during his first term he had difficulty moving legislation past a Democratic majority.

Schwenk noted that he had kept his campaign promises and that "those who desperately tried to tie my hands were defeated in the election of 1963." Indeed they were. The election of 1963, as a matter of fact, was the last times the Republicans elected a mayor or an alderman-at-large. As far as the figures, Schwenk did his homework, pointing to the fact that Koenig spent more in debt service than he ever did. In the end we agreed that Milt Reynolds said it best when he said figures lie and liars figure.

It's almost always nice to hear from Schwenk.

BACK AT THE POOL—

It's hard to get a line on what's happening on this one other than nothing's happening and the city is faced with yet another delay on the swimming pool at Dietz Stadium.

The bids on phase II came in a little high, you see, but nothing could be done about it because the mayor was out of town on vacation and nothing gets done without him and, golly, when he got back on Tuesday he was so busy and we hope we can do it next week, what ever has to be done.

In fact, there's no rush. Previous snafus guaranteed that no one will be in that pool this summer. There's always '76.

Fish, Gilman In Minority

WASHINGTON, D.C. Congressmen Hamilton Fish Jr. (R-25th) and Benjamin A. Gilman (R-26th) were on the losing end of an amendment that retains sanctions against schools that do not meet federal guidelines for sexual integration of physical education programs and school organizations.

Fish and Gilman voted against the measure—Congressman Matthew F. McHugh (D-27th) did not vote—as the amendment was carried by the narrowest of margins, 212 to 211.

In a week that saw a number of close votes on amendments to major bills, Ulster's congressmen consistently found themselves in the minority.

The House, by a 214 to 196 vote rejected an amendment that would have prevented the Concorde supersonic jet from landing at U.S. airports.

The amendment was designed to quash a possible Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) move permitting supersonic Concorde flown by the French and British to land at New York's Kennedy Airport and Washington's Dulles Airport.

Fish, McHugh and Gilman were in the minority with their vote in favor of the amendment.

McHugh failed to vote on an amendment to abolish the select committee on intelligence and thus terminate the House's probe of the CIA. The vote to retain the committee was overwhelming, 293 to 122, with Fish and Gilman in the majority.

There was a close 199-196 vote on the question of maintaining some $3 million in federal subsidies for the cotton growing industry. It was upheld with Fish and Gilman voting with the minority and McHugh in the majority.

Answers 'Questionnaire'

TOWN OF ULSTER
An answer to the Town of Ulster Democrats' questionnaire on town government sent to residents recently has been given by GOP town chairman Joseph Lohmaier—publicly.

Claiming that the Democrats should have taken time to acquaint themselves with the performance of the Ulster Town Board, especially in view of the fact that one of the board members is a Democrat, Lohmaier said the following facts are "substantiated by the record."

• The town board presented a zoning ordinance to the residents, who after public hearings rejected zoning. The Democrat-sponsored poll asked the question, "Do you feel zoning will protect the homeowner?"

• To the question, "Do you feel that the town should have built a new office building even though the voters voted against it?" Lohmaier replied, that the town voted down a bond issue for a new office building rather than the new office building itself. Available funds, rather than borrowed funds, have been used for its construction. The need was self-evident, he said.

• To the question, "Do you feel large tax money issues should require a public vote?" Lohmaier said that any expenditure in excess of $100,000 within one year must, as mandated by law, be approved by the voters.

• To the question, "Do you want a full-time police force?" the GOP chairman said, "Of course everyone wants it but, can we afford it?" He estimated its cost at about $250,000 annually, pointing out that the town now has constables working around the clock.

• Regarding the Democrats' query as to whether districts and areas such as Spring Lake should have a town water-sewer district? Lohmaier replied that the GOP has done everything possible to obtain water for Spring Lake but has been repeatedly turned down by the City of Kingston.

Analysis shows that the cost burden for a separate water-sewer district for Spring Lake would be prohibitive. Residents of the Spring Lake area turned such a proposal down because of the tax burden it would place on them, he said.

• To the question, "Should a garbage collection be a town-run service?" Lohmaier said it has been considered but was rejected because it would cost more taxpayer's dollars than what the average taxpayer is now paying for private collection.

• Regarding whether the town highway department budget of $250,000 is too high? the GOP chairman said the town boasts the finest in roads, repairs and snow removal service with the exception of the inconvenience due to the sewer construction.

• Regarding the board's favoring the addition of two more councilmen, Lohmaier said it was unanimously agreed by GOP and the Democratic town board member to follow the recommendation of the State Judicial Conference and increase its board membership, after public hearings.

Groupism

Editor, The Freeman:

I am somewhat dismayed by recent trends which seem to permeate our society. There is too much emphasis on collective groupism and finding someone you can identify with in this or that group. Concurrent with this trend is a polarization of ethnic and economic groups, which produces more tension and conflict. The individual is being mesmerized into passive acceptance and submission. The state has too much control over the ordinary citizen.

With all due respect to modern sociology and psychology, reliance on the group, or welfare, or whatever organization it may be, should be de-emphasized and individualism, self-reliance and independence should be fostered. Groupism breeds depending on others and only adds to whatever insecurity may exist. In the final analysis, it is the individual who must help himself or change a situation for the better.

F. J. Turner, the historian, said that what made America great were the traits of self-reliance and rugged individualism developed by pioneers on the frontier wilderness where man either survived or perished on his innate ability.

We don't have that frontier laboratory today, but individuals in 1975 can shrug off passive acceptance and the prevailing attitude of "let somebody else do it or solve the problem" and open up the frontiers of mind and spirit lest we find ourselves in that perplexing situation predicted by Orwell in "1984."

Yours truly,
KENNETH J. BARR
High Falls

Editor, The Freeman:

My parents live in Tillson and for the first 23 years of my life, Ulster County and Tillson was my home. In act, today, when I use the term "home," I refer to Tillson.

While I was home during the 4th of July weekend, a serious situation came to my attention that on Wednesday, the 23rd of July, in the evening at the Tillson Fire House, the Town of Rosendale elected officials will hold a public hearing on what promises to be a display of spot zoning and complete indifference to the environment and the community. This display of insensitivity involves a request that the Town of Rosendale rezone a residential area in Tillson, industrial, so that the Johnny-on-the-Spot Disposal Service, Inc., of High Falls, may dump raw sewage on the land in question. The land in Tillson is presently zoned at the highest residential level possible.

Within the Town of Rosendale there is much land zoned industrial or commercial. — Why can't that land be used? A fact that compounds the problem is that the land in Tillson which Johnny-on-the-Spot would like rezoned is situated in close proximity to the Junction of the Wallkill River and Rondout Creek. This raises the real possibility that the discharge may result in contamination of a waterway.

I do not believe all aspects of the local, county, state and federal environmental protection requirements have been met. In particular, I question if the requirements of the National Pollutant Discharge Elimination Systems have been met.

I raise these questions because while I was home, it appeared that the Town Officials were not overly concerned with these points. I believe it would be boarded on malfeasance if town officials did not wait until all environmental requirements have been complied with before they even consider rezoning.

I seriously question how this land, in particular, was chosen when so much other land is available.

This exercise in community disruption is going to effect more than the Village of Tillson. It will set a precedent which will come back to haunt all communities in Ulster County.

Sincerely,
CARL N. GUERRERI

Slums

Editor, The Freeman:

It is good to know that in Woodstock they are getting after the slumlords. Many of us are aware that here in Kingston this blight is happening too and have wondered how it is possible to get the approval of a building inspector for some of the things that are being done to rundown old residences in order to make them into "apartments" for welfare families who can be counted on to pay high rents.

New Views on Austerity Budgets

By Carl Graham

Anyone can look at austerity budgets and conclude that the state law governing them is a rather punitive law," said James J. O'Connell, new superintendent of schools for the Rondout Valley Central School District.

Why are sports not allowed when they are just as important to some kids as Latin is to others?" he asks.

The subject is of more than passing interest to O'Connell, who succeeded Robertaccio on July 1. District voters twice have turned down a 1975-76 school budget and on Aug. 13 will vote individually on five items (transportation, sports and extracurricular activities, instructional supplies, library books and equipment) to determine if they are to be restored to the budget. Defeat of the five items would leave the district faced with a "bare bones" state-mandated austerity budget.

Asked for his views on BOCES (Board of Cooperative Educational Services), O'Connell said he had not had time to become familiar with the situation in Ulster County, although he "supports the theory of BOCES."

"In Westchester County, priorities and services were very much determined by the needs of local superintendents and boards of education," said O'Connell, who served as assistant superintendent and superintendent of the Carmel School District there from 1968-73.

Asked if he thought the schools had overemphasized preparation for college at the expense of vocational education, he said that education doesn't really lead society, it reflects it.

"Since the early 1960s education has swung to liberal arts, science, and college for all," he noted. "But since the late 60s it has been swinging back."

"I don't believe in giving total career choice to the kids, he said. "The schools, parents and children all should have an input."

Asked for his views on mainstreaming, the concept under which handicapped children are kept in regular school programs as much as possible instead of being put into separate programs, O'Connell said: "I totally support it."

Noting that Westchester BOCES began a mainstreaming program in 1968, he said: "If children have emotional or physical handicaps, putting them into an artificial setting reinforces the negative feelings they often develop about themselves. It is inhumane to try to do it that way."

Asked the "rich uncle" question (What would he ask the board for if a benefactor suddenly made the district a gift of a large sum of money?) O'Connell said he would set up a study committee to establish priorities "and study them very carefully."

Does he plan any major changes in the way the district is run? "I've been so busy with the budget problem that I really haven't had time to take a look. Until I have time to study the subject I would rather not comment."

O'Connell comes to the Rondout district with a varied background in education. He received his bachelor's degree in English and classical studies at Iona College in 1960 and a master's degree in elementary education three years later at the State University College at New Paltz. He taught elementary school in Harrison and was an elementary principal in Darien, Conn., before going to Carmel.

In 1974 he was awarded a prestigious Worth McClure Scholarship for graduate study at Harvard University by the American Association of School District Administrators. He holds a certificate of advanced studies from Harvard and expects to receive his Ph.D. in educational administration in June, 1976.

O'Connell, his wife Maureen and their five children are presently living in the Kerhonkson area. Four of the children will be attending Rondout schools and the youngest, four-year-old Kathleen, will probably be enrolled in an area nursery school.

Although he has been here only a short time, O'Connell is enthusiastic about the Catskill area. He and his family enjoy the outdoors, particularly gardening and sailing, and some of them are horse lovers.

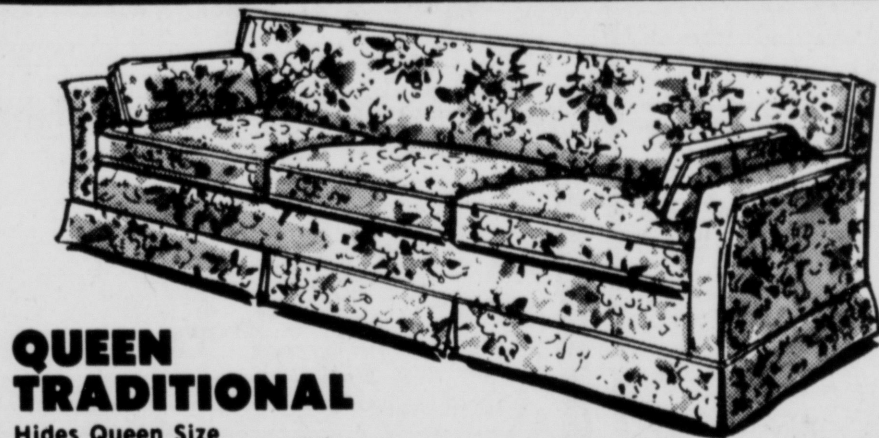

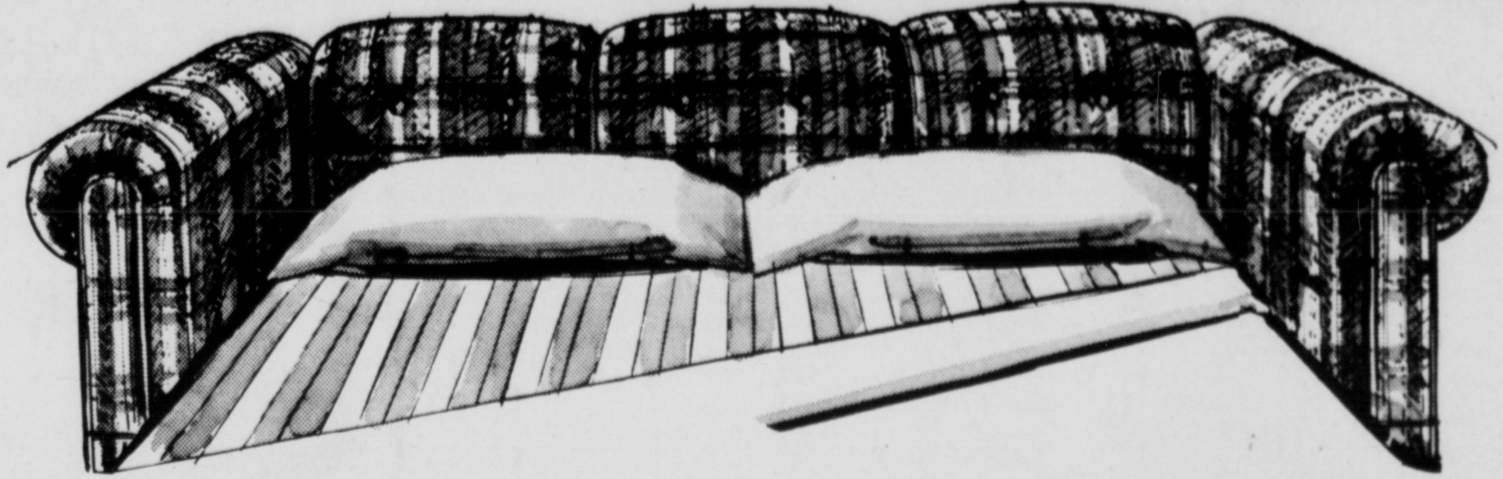

His first impression of the district's schools is favorable—"I look forward to seeing the district's educational excellence continue, and hope carefully to evaluate all programs and their related expenditures. I have always been concerned with accountability."

He intends to work carefully on budget preparation next year, with, he emphasized, "broad board participation from the very outset."

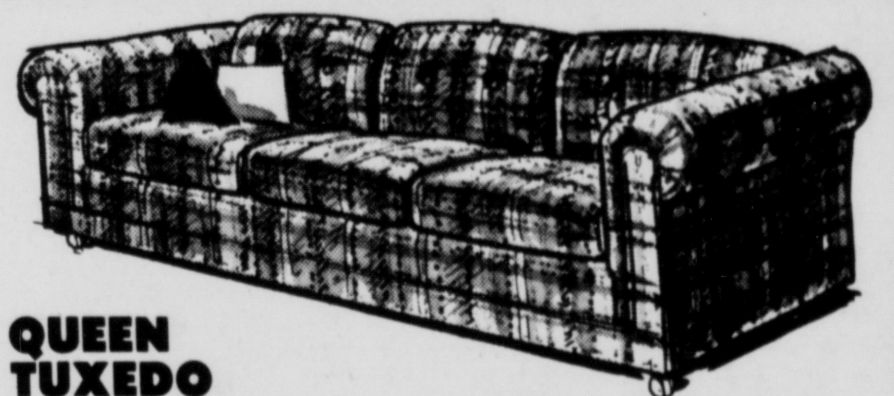

James J. O'Connell . . . new superintendent at Rondout Valley Central School district.

County Employees Earnings Listed

How much do Ulster County's blue collar and clerical workers earn as employees of the county?

The New York Public Employment Relations Board has published a report of the earnings of workers in 37 out of the state's 62 counties because many parties in negotiations have requested this type of information to help resolve disputes.

In compiling the report however, the board points out that it is not possible to directly compare one county's salaries with another even if similar job titles have been used because the job duties or requirements may not be the same. And, the board has not made any attempt to compare job duties in any county with those in another.

In Ulster County, the starting rates per hour for blue collar workers are as follows: laborer, watchman, auto mechanic helper, $3.03; motor equipment operator, $3.28; heavy equipment operator, $3.52; working foreman, auto mechanic, $3.76; senior auto mechanic, garage foreman, $4.02; bridge foreman, highway section foreman, $4.27; general highway foreman, $4.76.

All employees are receiving at least an 11 percent increase in 1975 and in 1976 an additional 28 cents per hour plus a cost of living increase based on 'Children Love The Circus ...

By Carl Graham

KINGSTON

Want to get a fresh view of a circus? Take a small child and watch the reaction. It might not be what you think.

Mrs. Suzi Van Wagenen of Woodstock and her mother, Mrs. Edith Costa, brought Mrs. Van Wagenen's two children, five-year-old Tracy and four-year-old Jamie, to last Thursday's matinee performance of the Clyde Beatty-Cole Brothers Circus at Kingston Plaza. The kids had a ball, but the things they paid most attention to were not always a part of the planned program.

"Can I have a souvenir?" Tracy asked as they waited for the performance to begin. "Later," Mrs. Van Wagenen replied.

A fanfare and overture by the eight-piece band brought on an animal act. The girls were not impressed with the danger involved in putting several lions and tigers through their paces, but jumped when the tamer punctuated the act with shots from his blank pistol. "I don't like it when they shoot the gun," Tracy confided.

The girls' first smile came when a group of clowns staged a fake bullfight, but their attention soon wandered to a hawk selling cotton candy.

Three aerial acts took over. Both girls watched intently as the performers mounted rope ladders, but the acts themselves got little attention. Tracy remarked that she and Jamie did several of the tricks on their jungle gym at home.

Another clown interlude got little attention from the girls, who were busy watching employees change props for an act in one of the end rings.

"When you are hot you go in the cold and when you are cold you go in the hot," remarked Tracy, apropos of nothing.

Three simultaneous animal acts drew little attention, either. The big finale, applauded vigorously by adults in the audience, found Tracy and Jamie absorbed in sno-cones, which their mother finally broke down and bought after numerous "hints."

"Is it over?" Jamie wanted to know as the band played a short intermission.

Neither girl reacted when a young man doing a bareback equestrian act fell under his horse.

Tracy: "Can I have a souvenir?" Mother: "Later, maybe."

Three juggling acts filled the arena with lighted tapers, Indian clubs, and flying rings. "I'm sticky," Tracy said, wiping sno cone juice from her face.

Seemingly aware of the music for the first time, she stood up for a better view of the band, which played the entire performance without a note of music on the stand.

Several performing elephants entered the arena, drawing a much greater reaction from Mrs. Costa and Mrs. Van Wagenen than they did from the girls.

"I hope we go swimming today, it's so hot," Tracy said.

A juggling and balancing act found both girls intent on a balloon vendor making his way through the crowd across the tent. Three young girls did a ball balancing act. "It's tough to do on a ball," Tracy confided.

She and Jamie spent the rest of the act watching roustabouts put up nets for the big aerial act finale.

One of the aerialists climbed onto the net near where the girls sat, slipping out of a pair of protective slippers before mounting the ladder.

Tracy: "They look like boys' clogs."

The act began. Tracy: "What's the net for?" Mother: "In case they fall."

A few seconds later the aerialists missed connections and one man plunged into the net.

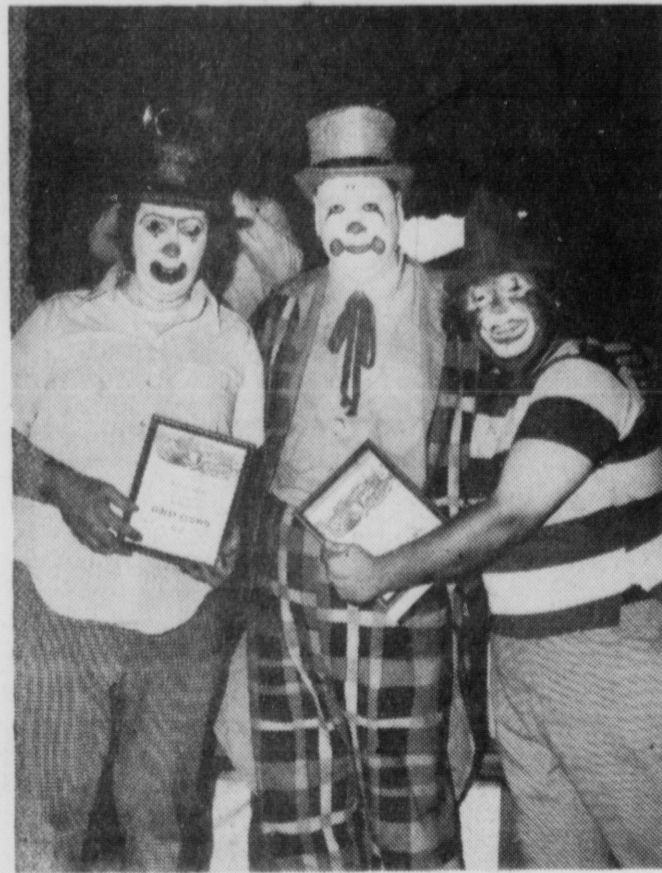

Mother: "That's what the net is for." Tracy: "Oh."

The girls stood up to leave as the show ended.

Seeks GOP Nod

Floyd (Cubby) Halwick of Ruby, is seeking the Republican nomination for superintendent of highways in the Town of Ulster.

A life resident of the town, he has many years of experience as a self-employed contractor owning and directing heavy equipment and men on construction work. He is also well experienced in truck sales and service as well as snow removal operations.

Halwick is presently an employee of the town highway department. He said he has complete knowledge of existing conditions of the highways and has plans for improvement which would be in the best interests of the people.

The GOP will chose its nominee at a caucus to be held Monday, Aug. 18 at 7 p.m. at Chambers School.

36 Get EMT Rating

KINGSTON

Ulster County gained 36 Emergency Medical Technicians in July to man its ambulances, the result of exhaustive 81-hour courses at BOCES in Kingston.

Mrs. Harriet Weber, president of the Marbletown First Aid Squad, was instructor for the class sponsored by the Ulster County Ambulance Association. Besides guidance by the education committee of that association, professionals such as doctors, nurses, local and state police, and attorneys lectured the newly certified technicians.

The course included lectures on methods of first aid; practical experience in local hospital emergency rooms; simulated emergencies.

The State Health Department sets up guidelines for the EMT course. At present only personnel connected with either commercial or volunteer services are eligible. There is a small fee, sometimes reimbursed by the student's own squad.

Anyone holding an EMT card that will run out within the year may take the course in September. Classes will be limited to 40 people. Information may be obtained from Esther Yeager, secretary, Ulster County Aabulance Association, RD 1, Box 168, Kerhonkson, N.Y.

Blind Attend Camp

POUGHKEEPSIE

Blind children and young adults from Ulster County are invited to a special camping program operated by National Camps for Blind Children Aug. 17-24 near Poughkeepsie, one of 25 such camps being held this summer in the United States and Canada.

The free program includes swimming, canoeing, horseback riding, crafts, campfires, beeper ball and nature studies, and is open to blind children from 9 to 19, a free service of the Christian Record Braille Foundation.

The State of New York camp will be held at Camp Berkshire in Wingdale, about 20 miles east of Poughkeepsie.

Applications are available from Larry E. Vincent, Welch Arms, Apartment B-4, Highland 12528.

Diplomas For Three

WHITE PLAINS

Three area residents are among early summer graduates of the Berkeley School of Westchester, White Plains.

Cynthia Baldwin Poole of 36 Reservoir Road, Highland, received a diploma for completion of the executive secretarial program.

Debra L. Acker of 66 Guyton Street, Kingston and Robin Buesing of RD 1, Walkkill, completed the intensive secretarial program, designed to provide the student in as short a time as possible with the technical skills required of an efficient secretary.

The City by the Bay Is Everybody's Favorite

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco not only has all the attractions any tourist would want, but it welcomes visitors. It's a pleasure to be a blundering rubber-neck here.

Visit Chinatown and gawk at the trinkets. Ride the cable car — on the outside bench — down to Fisherman's Wharf. Go down to the cliff at the ocean and strain to see the seals. Have an Italian dinner in one of those little North Beach cafes.

They say this is "everybody's favorite city," and that must be why more than 2 million visitors come to San Francisco every year. Tourism has become the city's biggest industry.

San Francisco is popular for many reasons — a mild climate, a spectacular geographical setting, a deep cultural life and an enthusiasm for life that came with the 49ers and still marks the city by the Golden Gate.

San Francisco is peopled by warm and friendly citizens, most of whom were not born here but choose to live here. There are the Italians of North Beach, the Chinese in Chinatown, the Japanese, Irish, American blacks and others who make it a truly cosmopolitan city.

San Francisco is a year-round city. The weather is probably best in September and October. July is as foggy and often as chilly as January. Rain is unlikely between June and September. "Summer" clothes are not appropriate in San Francisco even in the summertime. Be sure to have warm things to wear.

Coming by auto, you pay to get into San Francisco over one of the great Bay Bridges, but there is no toll when leaving.

By train from the east or north, you get off on the east side of the Bay and arrive by bus in the city. The Greyhound Bus station is in downtown San Francisco. From the airport there is regular bus service to the city for a $1.15 fare. Taxi to the city from the airport runs more than $10.

A single room at the St. Francis, Hilton and Fairmont Hotels runs about $30 a night minimum. At good smaller hotels in the same downtown area, such as the Chancellor or Cartwright, a minimum single room is $15 or $16.

The better motels in San Francisco and nearby suburbs charge $20 to $25 a night.

A visitor is wise to check in with the San Francisco Convention & Visitors Bureau, which publishes a large array of literature on the city and offers a recorded telephone summary of what's going on — dial 291-2000.

Gray Line buses offer a variety of tours: one to sites within the city such as the Old Mission Dolores and Golden Gate Park; a night life tour which stops for a drink or dinner at a couple of noted nightclubs; and longer trips across the Golden Gate Bridge to see the tall redwoods in Muir Woods or the wine country around Napa.

San Francisco has extensive and varied public transportation. The municipal railway streetcars and buses go everywhere in the city for a 25 cent fare. The old cable cars are an experience not to be missed. And, by contrast, BART, the city's brand new automated subway, offers a thrilling ride in its shiny and comfortable electric cars which speed through beautiful stations with their automatic gates and polished steel surfaces.

The ferry boats are back on the Bay now, providing a seaborne trip to Tiburon and Sausalito in the north. Harbor tours, leaving from Fisherman's Wharf, offer a cruise around the bay, for a close look at Alcatraz and the Golden Gate Bridge.

You can go to Alcatraz. The old prison was opened to the public last year and the tour, conducted by the National Park Service, became an instant attraction. Reservations are required.

Gold Gate Park, with its miles of paths and varied landscape, the children's zoo, Japanese tea garden, paddle boats, lawn bowling, De Young Museum and huge Steinhart Aquarium can occupy a day or more of browsing.

From the park you can drive along Ocean Beach, stop to gaze at a sail in the distance and listen to the pounding waves — too powerful for surfers or swimmers in this area. Nearby is the San Francisco Zoo.

For shopping, downtown San Francisco still has its great stores, I. Magnin, Gumps, The Emporium, Macy's, and such specialty stores as Podesta Baldocchi and Brentano's bookstore.

Shopping at Ghirardelli Square and the Cannery near Fisherman's Wharf is a treat.

Along with the revived "Cow Hollow" along Union Street, Japantown and a few other neighborhood districts, they make San Francisco a collection of strolling avenues with interesting shops and places to eat.

San Francisco is widely known for great dining. There are elegant places like Trader Vic's and Ernie's. Literally hundreds of good restaurants cater to varying tastes — American, Chinese, Japanese, Italian, Greek, seafood, steak.

For atmosphere dining, the new Bank of America skyscraper, the city's tallest building, has a public restaurant, the Carmel Room, on the top, with a view of the city and surrounding territory from 52 stories up.

The "Top of the Mark," remembered by thousands of World War II vets who shipped through San Francisco, is still there. Across California Street, on Nob Hill, the Fairmont has its Crown Room, 29 stories up, and reached by a glass-enclosed outdoor elevator.

At the new Hyatt Regency Hotel near the old ferry building, there is a skyroom that revolves. You get to it on a glass elevator that rises up the side of the hotel's spectacular atrium-lobby, which itself has become one of the things to see in San Francisco.

Follows Father's Wake

CHICAGO (UPI) — Jon Erikson is planning to follow his father's wake back and forth across the English Channel next month.

Jon's father, Ted, holds the 10-year-old world's record time for crossing the English Channel both ways — 30 hours 3 minutes. His father is also only one of three persons who has successfully made the roundtrip.

Jon, who turns 21 Sept. 6, leaves the middle of next month for England in his attempt at the two-way swim during the 100th anniversary of the first accredited crossing of the channel.

"It was a little bit of both our ideas," said Jon, who has been swimming professional marathon races for five years. "I obviously was kind of interested in marathon swimming because of my dad. He thinks I have a pretty good chance if I can get the good weather."

Ted Erikson is footing the $3,000 bill for the trip over, the rental of a boat and the help of the Channel Swimmers Association, a group which officiates the crossings.

Jon already has had two tries at the channel. He failed at the age of 13 but returned the next year to finish with one of the top times for a one-way crossing.

"I was 31 when I first crossed the channel and it took me three attempts before I was successful (in the roundtrip)," the elder Erikson said. "I think it would be tremendous to see a young punk kid beat his dad's record. I would love to

Air Force Training

Airman Edward G. Ahlers of Wallkill has graduated from the U. S. Air Force's veterinary specialist course conducted by the Air Training Command at Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas.

Airman Ahlers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ahlers of RD Wallkill was trained to inspect food serving and storage facilities. Completion of the course enables him to receive academic credits through the Community College of the Air Force. He has been assigned to McGuire AFB, New Jersey.

Airman Ahlers is a 1974 graduate of Wallkill Senior High School.

Airman Janice C. Junquet, daughter of Mrs. Pauline L. Junquet of Highland, has been selected for technical training in the U. S. Air Force aircraft maintenance field at Chanute AFB, Ill.

Airman Junquet is a 1971 graduate of New Paltz Central High School.

'ALCOHOLICS HATE THEMSELVES'

Three Doors Open: Insanity, Prison, Death

KINGSTON

"A tranquilizer is a dry drink instead of a wet one to an alcoholic," a member of AA (Alcoholics Anonymous) told LIFE in a private interview. AA members want people off these tranquilizers and sleeping pills. They disapprove of doctors following this treatment route because "... alcoholics must realize what they are and that they have difficulty coping emotionally — it has nothing to do with the intellect. Once off the pills they go on to booze!"

The topic was ALCOHOLISM — a disease which leads to emotional scars of abuse, mistreatment and neglect. Yet despite educational advancements on the subject, public rejection and repulsion of "the lush" continues.

Three doors are open to the alcoholic: (1) Insanity; (2) Prison or (3) Death. Harsh facts which AA members feel can be transformed into another choice — living or dying.

"There is hope — there is life for alcoholics," our AA member stressed. "There is love for alcoholics too, for alcoholics hate themselves with a vengeance!" she concluded.

A brilliant woman works during the day, then drinks herself into oblivion every night. Her "social" drinking began during college days. She has been drinking for the past 20 years and recently she enjoyed two full weeks of sobriety. She had faced up to her problem of daily coping — joined AA and now says: "I am alive again." It is the beginning of a daily struggle to maintain that life.

The story is repeated over and over again. According to our local AA, it includes nuns, priests, doctors, professionals and semi-professionals. Alcoholism cuts across every socio-economic level — rich, poor, intellectuals, white-collar workers, skilled and unskilled workers. And 80 percent of these alcoholics are men and women who are attempting to lead normal lives, according to the National Council on Alcoholism.

Drinking kills — the drinker and other people. According to N.Y.S. Troopers (Hurley Barracks) Robert Schanck and Robert Reilly, 199 drunk driving (DWI) arrests were made during the first six months of this year in Ulster County. Troopers feel something should be done to identify the alcoholic and get him away from cars.

"My mother is an alcoholic, what can I do?" asks a teenager. "My son comes home drunk every night. I am afraid of him — he gets so violent," a mother says. "Jim wasn't on the job again today." Alcoholics damage other lives as well as their own. But AA members say: "Don't feed us more guilt — help us."

For most people alcohol is the catalyst that makes a festival a party. It "lights up" weddings, birthdays and countless other celebrations. But it isn't a new idea. Every civilization has had its own special brand of alcoholic beverage.

It's called sake in Japan. The Spanish drink brandy, Germans love beer, the French and Italians have their wines, the Dutch gin, the Mexicans tequila, Scandinavians aquavit, the Scotch—scotch. It's Slivovitz for the Yugoslavians, vodka for Russians and Poles and mead for the Knights of Old Americans — playing no favorites — drink it all.

The Division of Alcoholism, New York State Department of Mental Hygiene, takes the position that no matter what you call it — booze, sauce, moonshine — whether it's made from grapes or potatoes, raisins or barley, alcohol is the chemical ethyl alcohol and it is a depressant drug. Once consumed, your body burns alcohol at a fixed rate and nothing can be done to speed up the process. Drinking black coffee, walking around the block, taking a cold shower only serves to awaken, not sober, the individual.

Generally, here's how a drinker reacts to alcohol: one or two drinks — he feels a change of mood. Three drinks — his mood is further affected, his judgment slows and his coordination is off. Five drinks — his vision blurs, his speech is fuzzy and his physical reactions slow down. Eight drinks — he staggers, loses his balance and sees double. By this time, deep intoxication has set in and the drinker can become unconscious. The drinker is in a deep coma and the breathing center in the brain can become paralyzed.

Writing in a booklet "The New Alcoholics: Teenagers," Jules Saltman states that in many social, national and religious groups, the drinking of alcohol is an accepted practice for young and old alike. Among Jews, for example, wine-drinking has a religious connotation on several occasions in the year. People of French or Italian background generally have wine on the table at mealtimes for all ages.

"Women are drinking more these days in the secrecy of their own home . . ."

People of French or Italian background generally have wine on the table at mealtimes for all ages.

Saltman also says: "The freedom to drink established by ethnic drinking habits does not always have similar results. Jews, Chinese and Italians, who habitually drink a good deal, have a low ratio of alcoholics. Yet they probably drink as much as do the French (in France and the Irish, also heavy drinkers as a group, both of whom have much alcoholism, and much illness and other problems related to their drinking.

The difference between those groups that have problems with drinking and those that do not seems to lie not so much in the extent of their drinking as in how and why they drink," concludes Saltman.

Our AA spokesman says: "People drink for many reasons — loneliness, frustrations, inadequate personalities, fear, lack of love, inability to cope, or makes decisions."

And it is not always the male who is leading the race to alcoholism. Women are drinking more these days in the secrecy of their own home (called 'closet drinkers') and teenagers, reports are now showing, are turning from narcotics to 'boozing it up.'

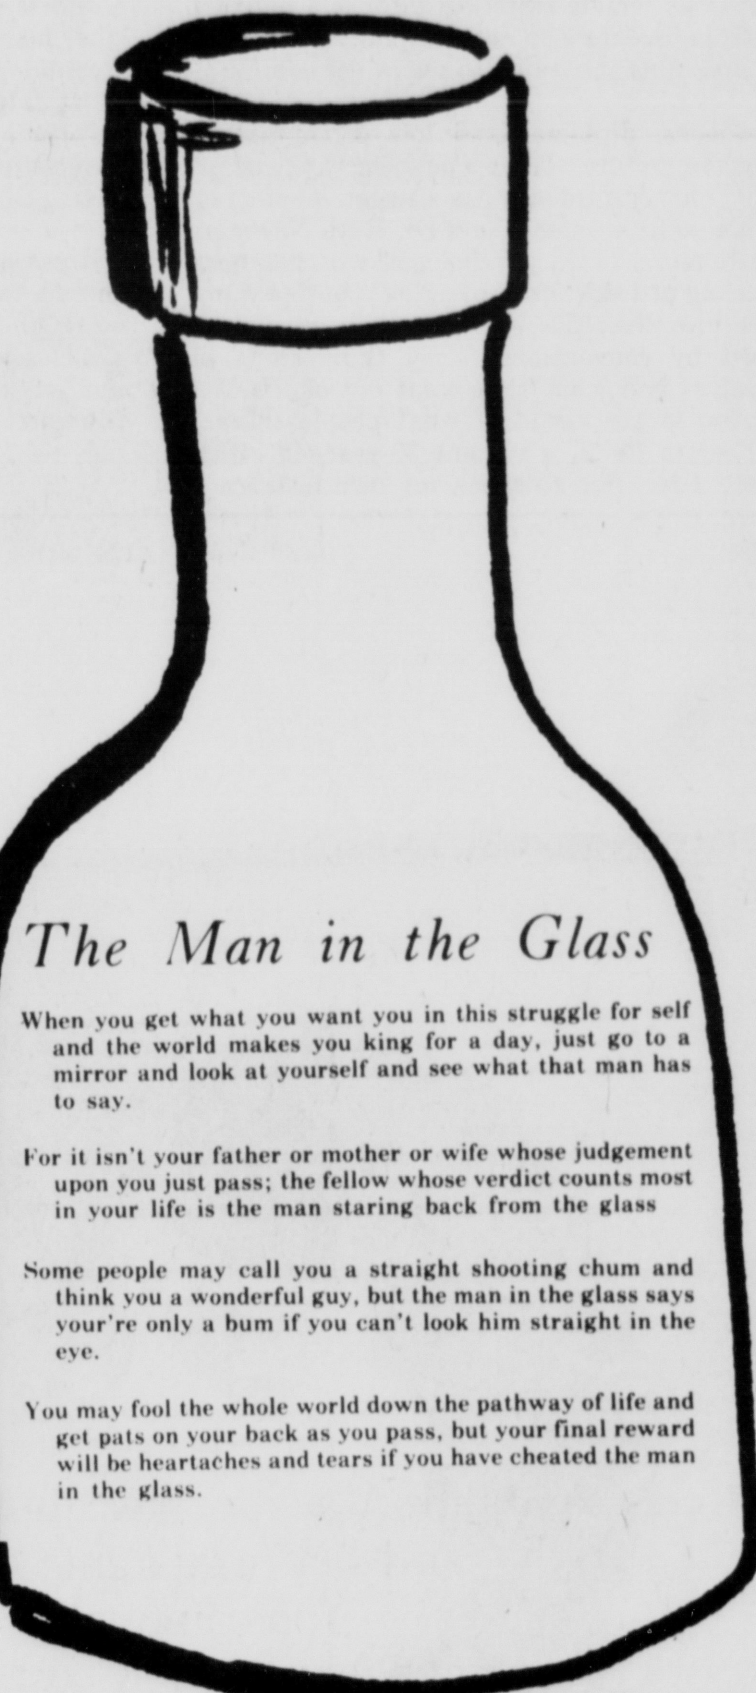

The three doors through which an alcoholic may enter, as stated earlier: Insanity — after a progression of incidences when withdrawal from alcohol results in hallucinations, convulsions or delirium tremens. In the latter case, an alcoholic begins to hear, feel and see things that aren't there. He must be hospitalized at this stage. Prison — when, under the influence of alcohol, a person harms another individual. Death — driving while intoxicated or mixing alcohol with sleeping pills or tranquilizers.

Volumes could be written about alcoholism but of primary concern to those of us in Ulster County — what is being done about it here

On March 3 of this year, Resolution 3 received unanimous support from the Ulster County Legislature. It dealt with establishing a program of education at UCCF for first offenders arrested of driving while intoxicated or impaired and with a blood alcohol content of less than 20 percent.

Robert Koster, associate dean of faculty for Continuing Education at UCCF told LIFE the program is moving ahead according to plans. Instructor is Ruth Craig of Willow who works with Alcoholics Anonymous.

In his conversation Mr. Koster pointed out that most judges are reluctant to "pull a man's license because of his job. As a result plea bargaining was involved in dispensing of cases. The course of education at UCCF serves to make people face facts

The Man in the Glass

When you get what you want you in this struggle for self and the world makes you king for a day, just go to a mirror and look at yourself and see what that man has to say.

For it isn't your father or mother or wife whose judgement upon you just pass; the fellow whose verdict counts most in your life is the man staring back from the glass

Some people may call you a straight shooting chum and think you a wonderful guy, but the man in the glass says you're only a bum if you can't look him straight in the eye.

You may fool the whole world down the pathway of life and get pats on your back as you pass, but your final reward will be heartaches and tears if you have cheated the man in the glass.

If you answer YES to three or more of the Test Questions you are definitely AN ALCOHOLIC.

and, currently, the four sessions, one each week, are being attended by an average of 30 people per course."

The course is called RID — Rehabilitating Impaired Drivers.

Emil Groth, Alcohol Abuse Coordinator for the Ulster County Unit of New York State's Division of Alcoholism, charts several other courses of action. Working out of the Mental Hygiene Center at 400 Broadway, Kingston, Groth told LIFE his office determines needs within the county, resources available to meet the needs, and establishing programs. Groth says his office has lines of communication with AA groups, serves as a referral center; maintains liaison with the Alcohol Rehabilitation Unit at Middletown Psychiatric Center with the Kingston Office as a referral unit, maintaining informational flow with visits and follow-ups on patients; and has an Action Committee based and organized on guidelines from the state. The committee consists of laymen and professionals, 35 in all, meets once every two months to research out needs within the county.

Groth feels there are definite needs in this county. One of them is expansion of the out-patient program provided by the Mental Health Service. He also feels 'sobering-up stations' should be established since effective January 1, 1976, the Law of Intoxication will be de-criminalized and provisions of this type must be provided for those in need of them. (The law change does not deal with drunken driving charges.)

Groth told LIFE there are four sober-up (drying-out) stations in the state now. These stations are supposed to be free but funding still remains questionable, he states.

Among services now available to alcoholics in this county, according to Groth, are medical de-toxication processes done under medical supervision; put-out-patient care; and referral services which includes AA chapters throughout the county. LIFE learned there is an AA group meeting in Kingston every night of the week except on Thursdays.

The threat of alcoholism is real, Groth says. He cited the incidence of alcoholism has increased within the Kingston Consolidated School System at least 14 times. "These are unreported incidences and we are presently exploring funding programs to deal with another target group women."

Author Jules Saltman concludes that parents who wish their children to abstain from alcohol will have to be abstainers themselves. He writes: "They must teach by example, by their own lifestyle as well as by precept. The precepts may relate to moral standards and religion; their effectiveness will depend on how well they are instilled in the youngsters by their parents — again, largely by example and lifestyle."

Drinking is not a universal practice, and avoiding it need not be embarrassing or shameful. It is not a measure of adulthood or virility. It is not an effective easier of pain or solution to problems.

Today's New Mature Woman... Female, Forty-Plus and Free

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a five-part series on The New Mature Woman, prepared by the Information Center on the Mature Woman, 515 Madison Avenue, New York City. Today's subject is Female, Forty-Plus and Free.)

By Lynne Abraham

Being female and over 40 is a totally different experience for today's mature woman. Economic, scientific and social trends have combined to make a woman's second 40 years potentially the better half of her life. As a result, she now sees herself as a vital human being an image that is gradually being accepted by society at large.

Data gathered by the Information Center on the Mature Woman—statistics, sociological surveys and personal interviews—offer convincing evidence that the 21 million American women between the ages of 40 and 60 are taking advantage of new freedom and opportunities. For example:

- Latest Labor Bureau statistics show that almost 45 percent of working women in the United States are over 40. Most are employed full-time the year round.

- Older women are resuming their education. In September 1974, 548,000 female students over 35 registered in schools.

Women are assuming a more active and important role in community life. A survey shows that the average female state legislator is a married, over-40 housewife who entered politics to implement programs she wants to see in her community.

Paychecks, diplomas and lots of intangibles have given mature women a new sense of personal worth. Our culture still has a negative effect on the choices for women, says Dr. Ruth Newman, a Washington, D.C., psychologist who has been evaluating attitudes toward aging, but as women get into their 50s and 60s, they are not as trapped by conventions. They think more of themselves and what they want out of life.

I'm no longer afraid of what people think, says Rosetta Reitz, a vibrant 50-year-old office worker. I feel free to speak my own feelings. I want to be whatever I am and live every moment.

At the mid-point in her life, helped by medical science to feel good and look better at 40 than her mother did at 30, the new mature woman has time and energy to explore personal and professional options. And the feminist movement has assured that she does not have to go it alone. Free from many home and family responsibilities, she can look forward to making the most of what sociologist Jessie Bernard calls the years of "BOOP — Becoming One's Own Person."

The media are finally getting the message about today's older woman; maturity suddenly is in. Popular magazines that once ignored her are now celebrating the witty, with-it, glamorous, over-40 female. Indeed, Harper's Bazaar now devotes an entire annual issue to her. In publishing, there is a new kind of mature "woman's lit" books such as Doris Lessing's The Memoirs of a Survivor.

Films and television are finally portraying middle-aged women as they really are. Sensitive TV specials such as Tell Me Where It Hurts or Queen of the Stardust Ballroom don't make up for years of silly situation comedies where older women showed up only as meddling mothers-in-law, but they help. It helps, too, to see mature TV interviewers like Barbara Walters and Marlene Sanders appearing regularly, and to see Edith Bunker finally assert herself in All in the Family.

Movie critic Gene Shalit recently wrote about the new breed of movie actresses bursting beyond background roles to a foreground of formidable performances. He cites such women as Gena Rowlands and Ellen Burstyn, but, interestingly, fails to note that they are not sweet young things, but mature women with both a past and a promising future.

Right now, the new mature woman may be more a forerunner than a social reality. But with so much time ahead and so many options open, the classic hedge of "What, at my age?" is clearly out of date. Mature women, exuding what Margaret Mead calls Post-menopausal zest, now ask, Why not at my age?

Tel Aviv's Amazing Uri Geller Playboy Aura About 'Spiritualist'

By Marian Christy

Israeli psychic Uri Geller — 28, single, distractingly handsome — is in a posh cocktail lounge alternately drinking ice cold milk and demonstrating how channeled brain waves can bend metal objects.

Eyes closed, his thoughts a million miles away, he gently rubs a spoon. It quickly curls. He touches a key. It bends in instant response. He turns his back and jots down a number.

"Concentrate!" he orders. "I am transferring that number to your brain!"

In a split second, I've jotted down 018. Geller shows me his notes. He, too, has written 018.

Back turned, Geller sketches a crude drawing of a mountain with definite peaks and valleys. "I am transferring that picture to you!" Without hesitation I duplicated his sketch, line for line.

Geller, a 6-foot male-model type in a boldly printed Italian shirt that bares his hairy chest, attempts to explain his extraordinary, if controversial powers:

Geller, who believes he is a distant cousin of Sigmund Freud on his mother's side, claims he cannot be more explicit. "All this is impossible to explain," he says.

The psychic, who has been raveling through the United States since 1972, has done experiments at London University and Stanford Research Institute. Scientists supervising the test admit that the traditional laws of physics have been challenged. Geller talks about "legitimizing" parapsychology in the world of science.

Dr. Wernher von Braun, one of the testers at Standord, commented that Geller's extraordinary powers represent "certain phenomena for which we have no scientific explanation." Geller says he "repaired" von Braun's electronic calculator without touching it.

Physicist Stood in Awe . . . Still There Are Skeptics

Dr. David Bohm, a physicist who headed the University of London's research team, stood in awe as Geller triggered a geiger counter 500 times its normal count — apparently via thought waves. Bohm coined the phrase, "The Geller Effect," to describe the psychic's inexplicable powers.

Still there are skeptics who accuse Geller of using "tricks" which are quicker than the eye.

"Criticism doesn't bother me," says Geller, who won't touch alcohol because of its "distortive" qualities and the possibility liquor might impair his powers. "All negatives expressed verbally or written, create public controversy. Without controversy, it isn't possible to be internationally famous. Despite the fact that some people have labeled me a quack and a charlatan, I continue to pursue my work. Respected scientists have admitted that I defy accepted concepts. And, really, that's the point of my existence."

Geller's "gift," regularly demonstrated on college campuses around the world, is being carefully merchandized for commercial marketing. His just-published autobiography, "My Story," soon will be made into a movie in which Geller will star as Geller. Other build-ups include a record of his poems, national television appearance and invitations to parties hosted by members of the international set.

On the possibility of becoming a millionaire, he says, "It's inevitable."

Geller talks of buying a penthouse apartment in a skyscraper. "I want to be high up and as near to outer space as possible," he says. "I must live in elevation because my energies come somewhere from beyond."

Contradictions surround the Geller image. He is blessed with great physical attractiveness which he highlights with the right haircut and the right clothes. There is a Playboy aura about him, the suggestion of a moneyed jet-setter, the image of a Gentleman's Quarterly model. Is Geller "serious" about his work?

"I will not be a guinea pig locked up in an institute somewhere!" he says. "I like being in the company of beautiful women. I love skiing at St. Mortiz and skin diving in the Bahamas. If I'm somewhere in Europe and feel like going on a buying spree, I love being able to hop a plane to Rome where I go into the posh boutiques to buy clothes."

"I suppose I have a dual personality. In a way, I'm 'down to earth.' In another way, I'm 'far out.'"

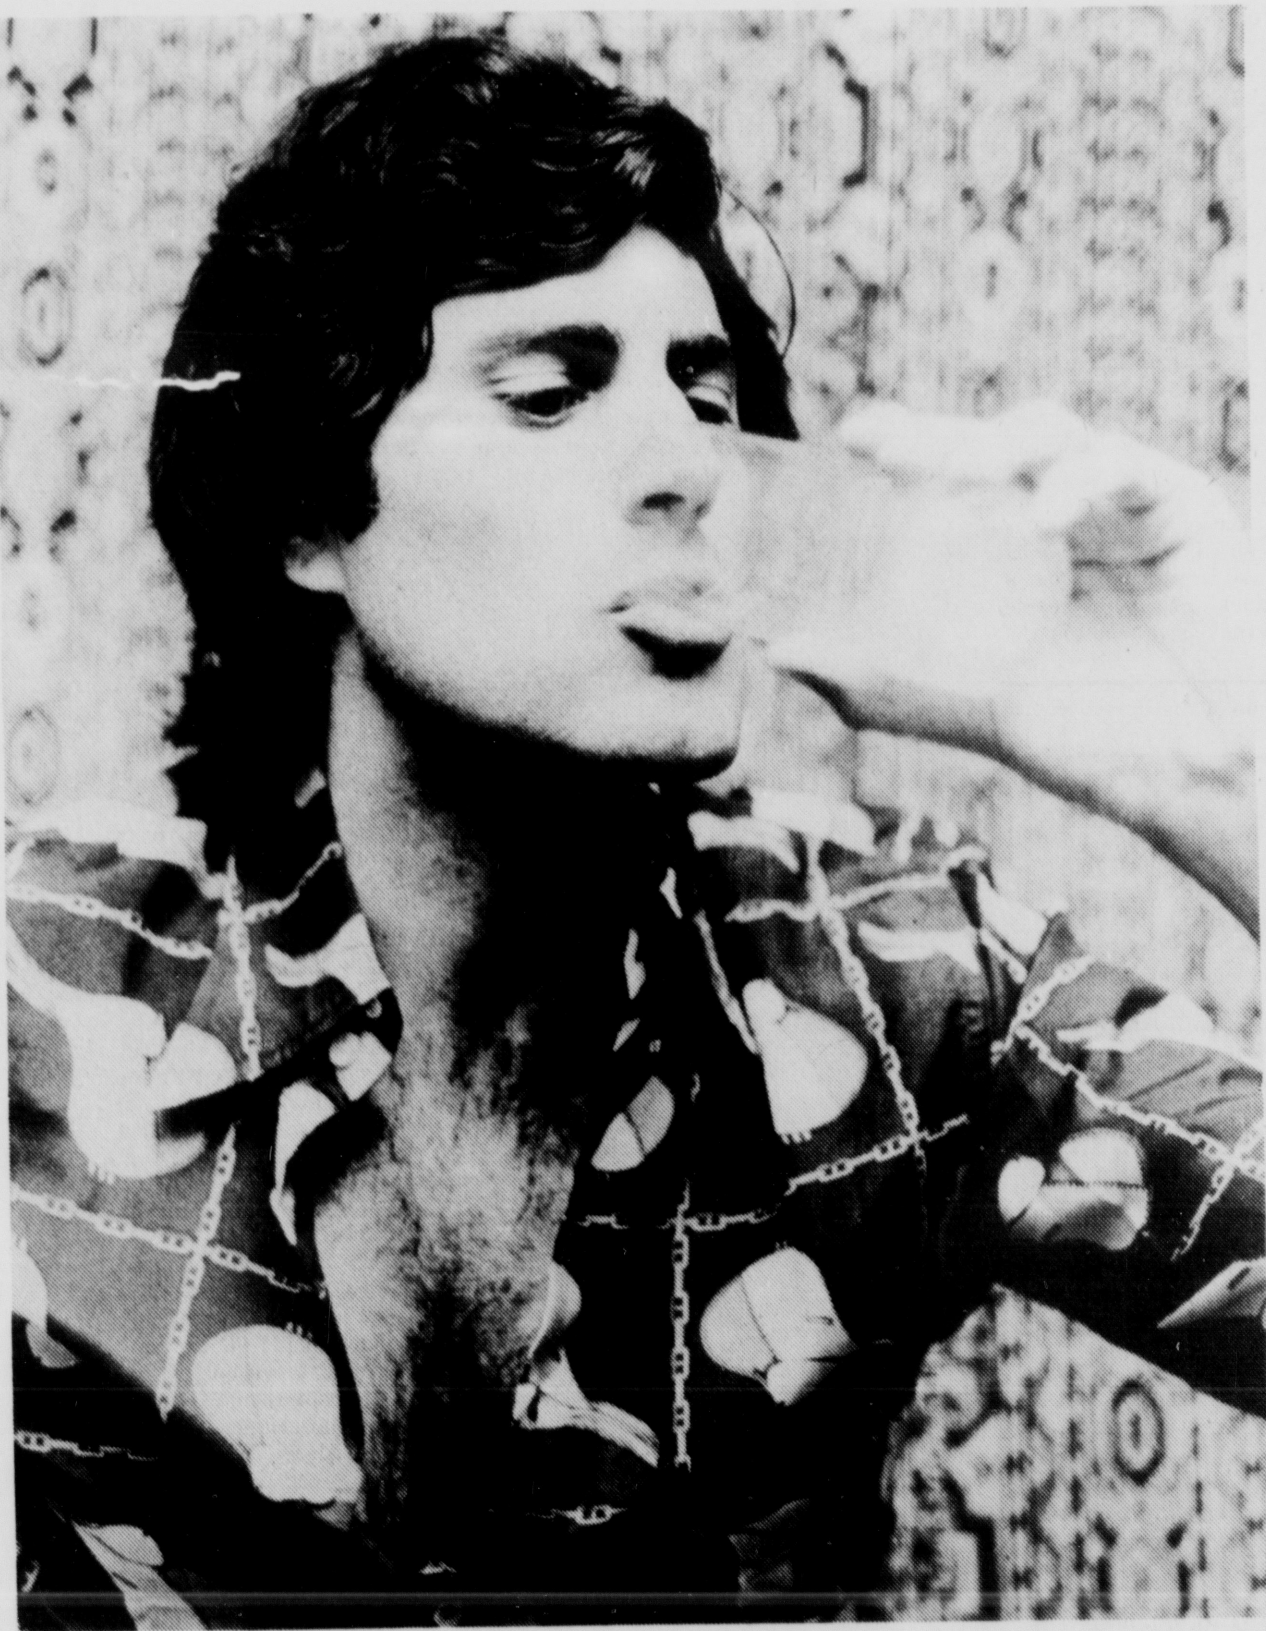

"Nobody can tell me what to do. I have many strange powers. But I cannot be forced to unlock my energies. I must be free — totally, uninhibitedly, unequivocally free. That means being able to do what I want to do."

Many young women have tried to convince the "spiritualist" they should or could be Mrs. Uri Geller. Some have loved him and married others. Some have loved him — no avail. Some have loved him only from afar.

"I have had many girl friends," he admits. "But I've been in love only three times. Marriage to me would be difficult. I'm jealous. That's my trouble. I would even be suspicious if my wife wanted to take a trip alone somewhere. I would have to feel that she was totally mine. You see, I'm very, very possessive."

"I won't marry till I'm 35," says Geller, a man of honey charm who talks openly about long and short-term romantic encounters by first name only.

The strange power of Uri Geller, an only child, began, he says, when he was four and playing alone in a beautiful garden near his home in Tel Aviv. He claims to have been struck by a bolt of silvery light, and from that day forward could bend metal and restore broken watches by intense concentration. "My father, who was an Army officer and a man of logic, didn't take me seriously," says Geller. But my mother would take me seriously," says Geller. But my mother would take me aside and tell me that I was very, very special. Of course when she'd come home after playing cards with her friends, I'd tell her how many piasters she won or lost before we exchanged hellos. She'd ask me how I knew. I told her I had a picture in my mind. That's still how I see everything. I close my eyes and there's a television screen on which images pass."

Monday Is Artist's Day at Hudson Valley Wine Village

Any Monday, except holidays, during the summer and fall, the welcome mat will be out and the usual parking fee waived for landscape artists at the Hudson Valley Wine Village in Highland.

The Wine Village is open every day except Sunday for free tours and wine tastings. The Monday Artist's Day concept is a new policy introduced by Claire Cooperstein, the winery's Community Relations Director, herself a local artist of note.

Writing to 25 local art associations and art schools, Ms. Cooperstein noted: "When I looked at the picturesque courtyards and stone and stucco buildings, surveyed the rolling vineyards, the ponds, the groves of century-old oaks and pines, the river vistas, I knew immediately that landscape painters would find it heaven."

Fortunately, the owner, Herbert Feinberg, is a patron of the arts as well as a connoisseur of wine, and readily agreed to invite the Hudson Valley artists to make use of his facilities.

There are dozens of picnic tables which can be used for painting supplies. Area artists are also welcome to bring their lunch, and use the picnic grounds — make a day of it. There's a snack bar, if they prefer. The only thing the Wine Village asks is that visiting artists bring newspapers or plastic clothes to protect the picnic tables if used for painting, and make use of the waste cans.

The Hudson Valley Wine Village is hoping to sponsor an art show of local landscapes at the end of the season — with judging by a prominent local artist and suitable awards.

The Hudson Valley Wine Village is located on Route 9W in Highland, less than two miles south of the Mid-Hudson Bridge. Artists arriving earlier than 10:30 in the morning should phone the Saturday before. All artists are urged to contact Claire Cooperstein on arrival, for advice on the best views.

Con's Wife Waiting But Considered Fair Game

By Abigail Van Buren
1975 by Chicago Tribune
N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am married, although my husband is in prison. I do not go out with other men, and I don't entertain any, either. I live a clean, simple, uncomplicated life and am only trying to hang in there until my man comes home.

My problem is that most men think I am "fair game" because I have no husband home. There are several in my neighborhood who insist that I am "lonely," hungry for a man and desperately in need of the company of one. I am tired of trying to straighten these guys out.

Maybe if you print this, they will get the message. Just because a woman is alone doesn't mean that she is available.

WAITING FOR MY MAN
DEAR WAITING: Hooray for you! And I hope your man on the inside reads this. It will make his day. God bless.

DEAR ABBY: In fairness to the many older people like myself who cannot eat a large meal at one sitting and who eat many times a day (which the doctors assure us is healthier, anyway), I would like to present the side of the majority on "doggie baggers."

We enjoy restaurant eating every now and then, but my husband resents paying today's prices only to see half of my meal returned to the kitchen uneaten and then hearing me say, "I'm hungry" two hours later. Since asking for a doggie bag is frowned upon in some restaurants, a simple solution for me is to carry my own plastic bags.

Yes, I do this in some friends' homes, too. If you ask for a very small portion, the hostess thinks you ate before you came. And if you leave half of it on your plate, she thinks you didn't like it. But if you're truthful, the hostess is delighted to let you take your portion home to enjoy for several meals.

WOOF WOOF IN PA.

DEAR WOOF WOOF: I'm with you all the way. Many restaurants offer "a child's" portion at a reduced price, of which many senior citizens also take advantage.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 40-years-old, and I have a problem.

I always cry at sad movies, hymns, sad stories, parades, beautiful skaters and "The Star Spangled Banner."

Soon my son will be getting married. The plans for the church ceremony sound just beautiful and end with my son's presenting me with a single red rose! The thought of it sends chills up my spine.

I don't want to embarrass my son or husband by blubbering.

Do you have any suggestions? (I'm on hormones, so it's not the menopause.) Thank you.

SENTIMENTAL IN ILLINOIS

DEAR SENTIMENTAL: Being told in advance will prepare you for the presentation. I'm sure there won't be a dry eye in the house, so if you shed a tear or two, you won't embarrass anyone. Good luck and God bless.

DEAR ABBY: My dad and I are at a disagreement. He says I should not eat with my left hand. He says it is like eating peas with a knife.

I like eating with my left hand, and I think I am old enough to know which hand I feel more comfortable eating with. (I am 16.)

Dad says the etiquette books say that you are supposed to eat with your right hand.

Who is right? Please hurry your answer. I hate eating with my right hand.

BUGGED

DEAR BUGGED: I hope your dad is big enough to admit that he is wrong because he is.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

Camerata Chorale at Paltz

KAREN PONE

The Camerata Chorale will appear on the fourth program of the Music for a Summer Evening series, a part of the New Paltz Summer Repertory Theatre offerings. The concert to be presented on July 30 in air-conditioned Parker Theatre will begin at 8:30 p.m.

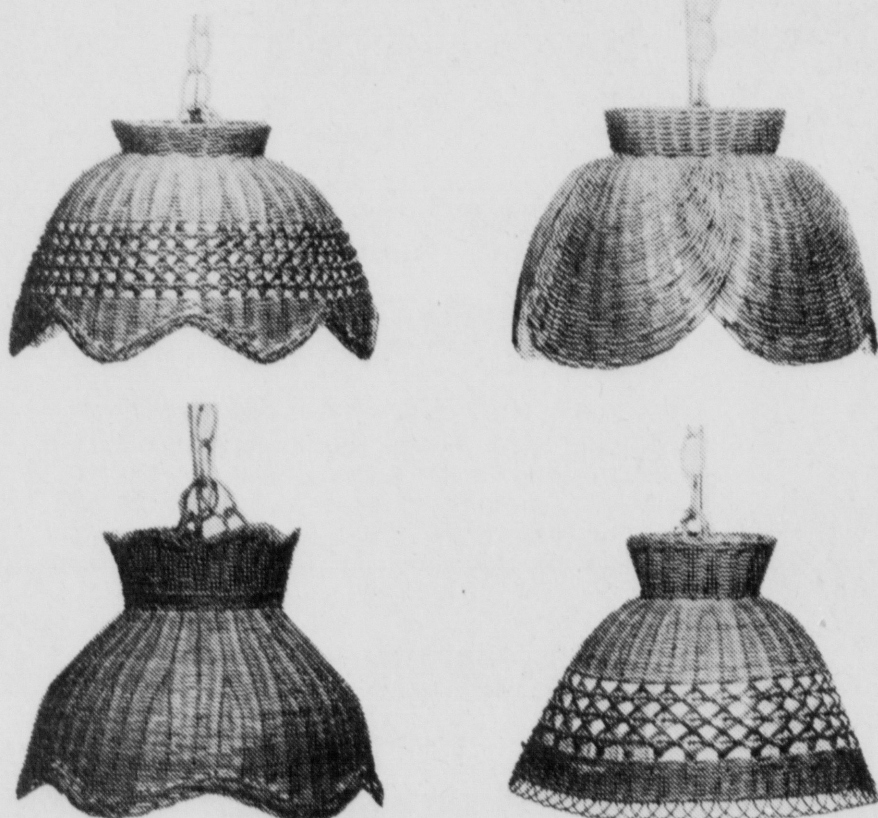

The Chorale under the direction of Lee H. Pritchard will present a program of light classical choral works including Brahms' Gypsy Songs, Opus 112, and will be accompanied by pianist Louise Im.

Also included will be works by Randall Thompson, including the "Last Words of David" and the "Alleluia," and a group of spirituals as arranged by William Dawson.

Betty and Curtice White, Hyde Park, will present a scene from Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Carousel," and there will be a performance of George Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F. In this two-piano arrangement Roxanne Holt and Karen Pone will be featured as pianists.

Mrs. Pone has been a member of the New Paltz faculty during the past year. Miss Holt is a student of Robert Mumper at New Paltz.

The final concert in the Summer Series will be given on August 6th in Parker Theatre featuring Barbara Hardgrave and Robert Casper in a program of light vocal classics and theatre music.

Pope Paul Pursues Own Detente in Eastern Europe

By NEA/London Economist News Service

Slowly but surely, the Vatican and most of the world's Communist governments seem to be getting on to the same wavelength. Not quite all of them. China and its European ally, Albania, think there is nothing that true Communists can usefully discuss with that leader of the world's reactionaries, the Pope; the new Communist rulers of South Vietnam kicked out the papal envoy left over from the old regime a few weeks after they took over in Saigon. But the Soviet foreign minister, Andrei Gromyko, and the Bulgarian party leader, Todor Zhivkov, called on the Pope last week and in Soviet-dominated Eastern Europe a red carpet awaits the Pope's emissaries these days.

The visit the Vatican's foreign minister, Archbishop Casaroli, paid to East Germany in early June went off very well and was officially described by his hosts as "valuable and useful." The same had been true of his visit to Prague in February. During both visits, local Catholic grievances against the government were aired.

Many Catholics in Eastern Europe were dismayed when, early in 1973, the Vatican went over the heads of the local bishops in Czechoslovakia and appointed some new bishops from among the pro-regime "peace priests." Fears of a Vatican sell-out to the Communists for the sake of filling a few vacant bishoprics were widespread. They seem to have been stilled. This may have something to do with the obviously tougher stance adopted by the Vatican since 1973.

But the East European Catholics' new confidence that they will not be sold out by a series of deals concluded behind their backs between the Vatican and the Communist governments comes also from their close observation of those governments.

As well as talking friendship, the Polish government has been issuing more permits for building churches. The Hungarian government has permitted some religious instruction for children in churches and has agreed to the appointment of 10 new bishops.

If the East German government now makes some concessions to the church, it will be because it is particularly anxious to get the political mileage that church approval gives to Communist regimes which are still short on political legitimacy. The East German government is also keen on seeing the last remaining links between the Catholic churches in East and West Germany severed through the establishment of full bishoprics in East Germany and the setting up of a national episcopal conference there.

The Vatican is likely to oblige, although it is not likely to want to offend the powerful (and rich) West German Catholics by sanctioning the formal partition of Berlin that the East Germans want.

But the big question that must now be on the minds of the Vatican diplomats and of the Pope himself, who is a warm supporter of the policy of detente with the Communist countries, is this: can the policy of small tactical concessions by both sides — very small ones so far by the Communist side — be successfully translated into more comprehensive deals? This is a vital matter for the Pope, who is said to regard the Catholic church in Eastern Europe (perhaps eventually reunited with the Orthodox church) as the true growth point of the Christianity of the future. The secularized West he is said to have virtually written off.

As Henry Kissinger has learned through his own attempts at working out a detente with Russia, in any such detente both sides must be pretty evenly balanced and each must be able to deliver what has been agreed. The Catholic church has already a rather weak hand and is rapidly losing strength; even fewer people are going to church even in the traditionally Catholic countries of Southern Europe and Latin America.

Unlike Western governments, it cannot impose military or economic sanctions. Besides — and this is perhaps even more important — it is having to cope with revolutionary tendencies from within that are getting steadily stronger in Italy, Spain, Portugal and various Latin American countries.

In May, the papal daily L'Osservatore Romano took the (for these days) unusual step of condemning Christians for Socialism, a movement that believes in marxist revolution through violent class struggle in which the Christians are to be not merely supporters and well-wishers but active militants. This movement, which has grown rapidly since its foundation in Chile in 1971, has supporters not only among the junior clergy and laity but even among bishops.

Its growing strength has alarmed many conservative and middle-of-the-road Catholics. They argue that energetic measures are needed to combat it. But how can Catholic revolutionaries be fought when the church has effectively disarmed itself against communism in recent years? It is the wider detente problem in miniature.

If the backlash gains strength, as it seems likely to, it may well slow down the papal Ostpolitik during Pope Paul's time and stop it altogether after his death. The Catholic church may return to the more outspokenly anti-Communist policies of the Pius XII era, with the predictable counter-reaction in Eastern Europe.

But if the "progressive" tendency gains even more ground inside the church, the Communist governments of Eastern Europe may wonder why they should negotiate with a partner so manifestly weak. Why make concessions which may later prove to have been unnecessary? This skepticism about the validity of the Catholic church as a worthwhile partner in a religious detente with the Communist world means that no serious concessions from the Communist side will be forthcoming for quite a while yet — certainly not during Pope Paul's lifetime.

World Evangelism Organization Cites Filipino Minister

National of the Year

The Rev. Casimero Lapura of The Philippines receives congratulations from Dr. Morris Cerullo, founder-president of World Evangelism, upon his selection as "National Minister of the Year." Training of national ministers and underwriting their crusades is one of the major thrusts of Morris Cerullo World Evangelism.

SAN DIEGO, Calif.

The Rev. Casimero Lapura of The Philippines, has been named "National Minister of the Year" of World Evangelism, Inc., it was announced by Dr. Morris Cerullo, founder-director of World Evangelism.

One of the main thrusts of the worldwide World Evangelism ministry is the training and sponsoring of national ministers in countries around the world to enable them to effectively evangelize their nations for Christ.

Rev. Lapura was one of more than 65 nationals who attended the 10th Annual World Deeper Life Conference of Morris Cerullo World Evangelism in San Diego. Other countries represented at the conference included the Soviet Union, Pakistan, India, Korea, Chile, South Africa, Nigeria, Guatemala and Norway.

Under World Evangelism's National Evangelists Crusades program, Dr. Cerullo personally has trained more than 75,000 nationals in various countries of the world, many of which not only went on to hold massive evangelistic crusades but in turn trained other evangelists in Dr. Cerullo's effective principles.

During 1974, the NEC Department of World Evangelism sponsored 641 national evangelists crusades with reported conversions numbering 412,561. More than 300 new congregations were begun in eleven countries.

Rev. Lapura has been acquainted with Morris Cerullo since 1959. A member of the International Board of Directors of World Evangelism, he resigned his position as District Superintendent of the Assemblies of God so that he could devote full time to evangelization of his country. Rev. Lapura supervises 14 evangelists and has established 34 churches. He is president of a Bible School which currently has 46 men and women being trained for the ministry.

Rev. Lapura has conducted 42 crusades and four mini-Deeper Life Conferences. He is planning similar conferences each month during 1975. His wife, Dulce, is also a supervisor with the NEC program.

Rev. Lapura was presented with a perpetual trophy by Dr. Cerullo during the San Diego Conference for his outstanding work in The Philippines.

The FCC and Religious Broadcasting

By UPI

The Federal Communications Commission, showered with 60,000 comments from the public, is considering a proposal to investigate limitations on free speech on radio and television stations owned or controlled by religious or sectarian groups.

Last December, two California men, Jeremy D. Lansman and Lorenzo W. Milan, filed a petition with the FCC seeking three things:

—Revision of rules permitting multiple ownership of noncommercial educational radio and television stations in a single market.

—Asking for a "freeze" on all applications by government owned and controlled groups for reserved educational FM and TV channels.

—Asking for a "freeze" on all applications by religious groups for reserved educational FM and TV channels.

In their petition Lansman and Milan said that while some religious programming was certainly worthwhile, they attacked much of the broadcasting as "mindless, banal programming aimed at some spiritless oleaginous God."

It was the third part of the petition that drew the heaviest response — some 60,000 comments attacking the petition with "a couple dozen" in favor, according to lawyers involved with the case.

The period for public comment has now been closed and Lansman and Milan have been given a chance to respond to the comments.

In their reply the two men said the comments precipitated by the petition — the second highest number ever received by the FCC — "reflect a good deal of confusion" about what the two sought.

"Petitioners did not suggest that the commission censor or even review individual programming judgments of religious or any other broadcast licenses," they said.

Instead, they said, they wanted an investigation "into the restrictions on free speech regularly practiced" by religious groups who broadcast on channels reserved by the FCC for "educational" programming.

The case involves some of the touchiest and murkiest areas of the constitutional guarantees of freedom of the press and separation of church and state.

In their reply to the comments, Lansman and Milan said they did not question the right of religious groups to control commercial frequencies but only the use of noncommercial reserved frequencies.

"They are not concerned with religion but rather with education," the petition said. "The basis of this complaint is that the unique relationship and resulting constitutional tension between religious proselytizing and secular education raises sufficient doubt to warrant further Commission inquiry."

The FCC has three possible avenues of action it can take on the issue — reject the position out of hand; grant the relief sought by Milan and Lansman; institute a formal rule making procedure.

Lawyers feel there is little chance the FCC will grant the relief sought by Lansman and Milan. There is more of a chance, they believe, it will institute hearings and a possibility it might reject the petition out of hand.

There is also the possibility the FCC could separate the three requests made by the two and act on each of them separately.

Mormon Society Meets

LAKE KATRINE

John H. Marshall, Bishop of the Kingston Ward of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints has recently announced the appointment of a new Relief Society Presidency. Named president was Mrs. Patricia DeBry of Woodstock. Her counselors are Mrs. Irma Sagazie and Mrs. Laura Sands, both of Mt. Marion.

The Relief Society is an organization of all adult women of the Mormon faith which teaches doctrinal lessons, homemaking, cultural refinement, and social relations. They also supply teams of women who visit all the women of the Ward monthly and provide spiritual and temporal advice. With the Bishopric and priesthood leaders, the Relief Society Presidency acts as the Ward Welfare Committee which looks into the needs of individuals and also the resources to cover these needs. They also supervise welfare production projects and compassionate service.

During the summer months, Relief Society meets on the second Thursday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at the chapel on Fording Place Road, Lake Katrine, (behind Miller School). The public is invited.

'Aims of Education, Philosophical and Theological'

PEEKSKILL

A week-long colloquium on educational curriculum sponsored by the associations of Episcopal schools and colleges early this month brought together three dozen participants.

They represented all levels of schooling from kindergarten into adult education and themselves were products of education in China, Philippines, West Africa, Hawaii, and all parts of the United States. The Rev. William S. Gannon, Headmaster of St. Mary's and St. John's School, Peekskill, delivered a paper before this meeting of the National Association of Episcopal Schools on "The Aims of Education, Philosophical and Theological."

Labeled "Colloquium 20-20" the presupposition was that a child born in 1970 entering first grade in the bi-centennial year 1976, would be 50 years old in 2020 A.D. and the question laid before the educators was "What sort of curriculum should this child be given now to equip him or her for leadership at that time?"

Opinions established at a preceding conference, held at the University of the South in March 1974, were confirmed at the New Harmony meeting and the implications extended.

These were:

• Education could be America's most important export in the 21st century;

• Present curriculum is inadequate because its internal structure is not suitable and its philosophy unsound;

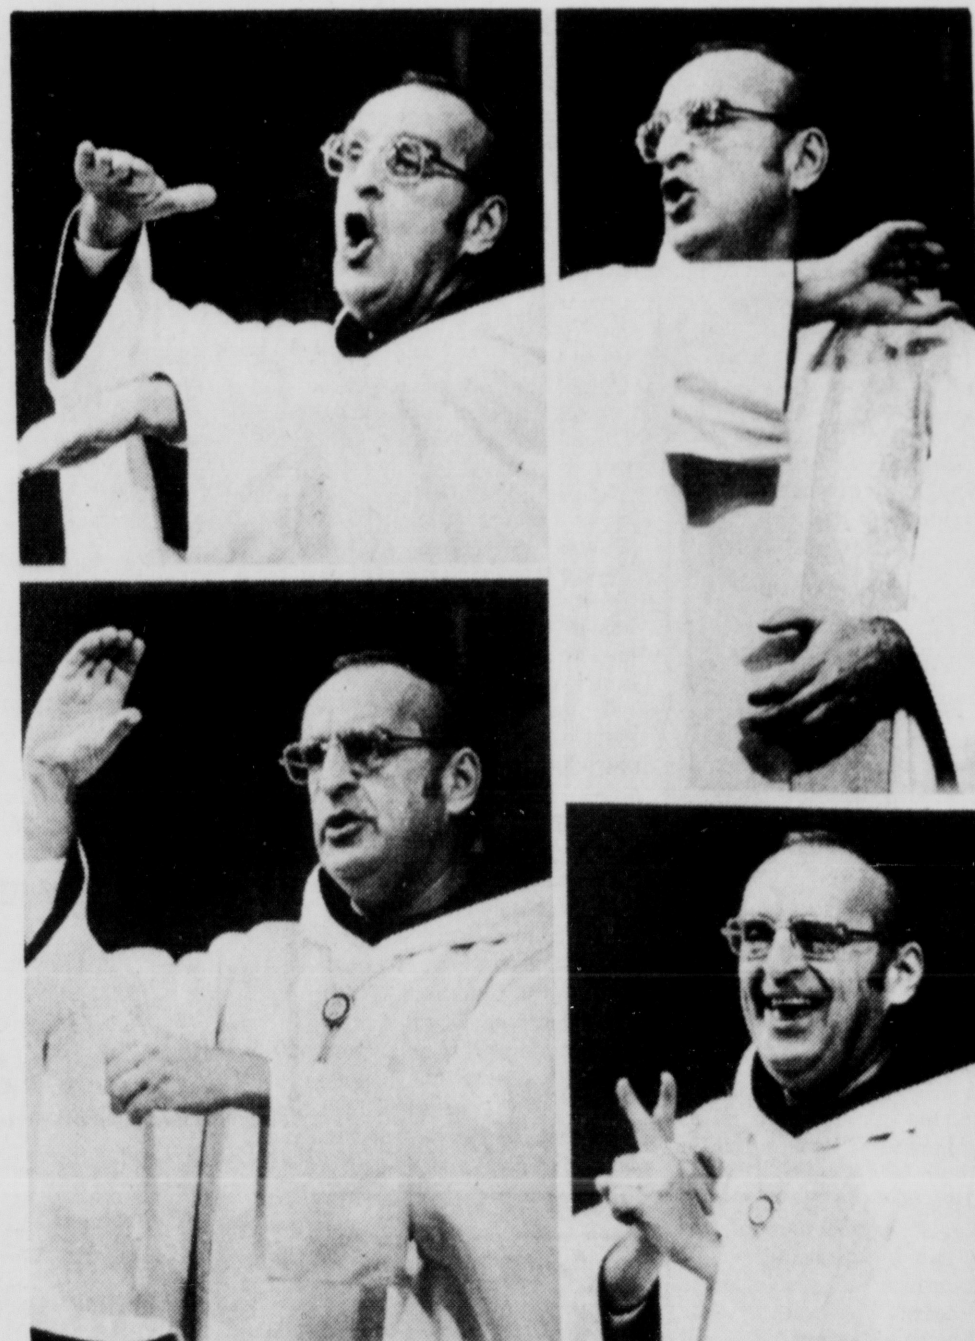

• The major problems afflicting the world today—peace, population, poverty, pollution, justice, disparity of opportunity, world overview—cannot be solved by today's curriculum;

• Today's problems are "we" problems as well as "I" problems, human rather than individual.

Tomorrow's education, the colloquium concluded, must be transcultural, transgenerational, interdisciplinary, multilingual, independent of political control, and inculcating an obligation to transform, improve, and continually update society. Moving to these educational concepts will require a new epistemology, retraining of teachers, education of constituencies, rewriting of texts, and the courage to implement the best judgment available.

Education must adopt a longer perspective and consider the overall needs of man which were listed in five categories: matter (food, shelter, clothing); society (parents, governments, business, unions, corporate efforts); self (identity, awareness, will, choice, freedom); aesthetics (beauty, value, worth, law, ethics); and religion (theology, personal religion, a perception of spiritual values, judgment, and redemption.)

The colloquium was funded by a grant from the Carnegie Corporation, was led by the Rev. John Paul Carter and Dr. Arthur Ben Chitty, and the New Harmony Ind. site was chosen because the two 19th century Utopian communities founded there represented religious zeal (the Rappites 1814-1824) and educational idealism (the Owenites

Bible Translators Work on Site

ATHENS, Greece

Hard by Mars Hill, where the Apostle Paul discoursed to the Athens intelligentsia about the identity of their "unknown God" to whom they had erected a temple, some 29 English-speaking Bible scholars will labor through this summer.

Their aim: to continue work on a translation of the Bible that will make the unknown God better known, not only to Greeks, but to all mankind.

The translation has already been under way for several years. Sponsored by the New York International Bible Society, some 100 scholars have already produced the New Testament, which has won the acclaim of Christian leaders throughout the world.

The complete Bible, to be known as the New International Version, is expected to be completed some time in 1978.

Four committees of Biblical scholars will work on the Old Testament at the University of Athens through August 23.

Specifically, work will be done on Exodus, Numbers, II Samuel, I Chronicles, Job,

Proverbs, and the text of Ezra, Nehemiah and Isaiah will be finalized. The last mentioned, according to Dr. Edwin Palmer, Executive Secretary of the Committee on Bible Translation, under whose aegis the translation is taking place, is the "most quoted book of the Old Testament."

The task is monumental, according to Dr. Palmer.

"Job," he says, "is the most difficult book in the Old Testament to translate. This is because it contains words that occur only once in the Bible and whose meaning is thus not reinforced elsewhere. In addition, its ancient style and poetic construction presents difficulties for translators."

Overall supervision of the translation is being done by the 15-man Committee on Bible Translation, which is the top rung of a ladder of committees doing the translating. The initial work of translating a book of Scripture, Dr. Palmer explained, is done by one group of scholars who meet locally. Their work is then gone over successively by an Intermediate Committee of Old Testament scholars, a General Editorial Committee, and then the top Committee on Bible Translation.

In Athens, the top committee will be meeting at the same

Saugerties Project

SAUGERTIES

The Saugerties Area Council of Churches with the assistance of the Church Women United will open a thrift shop at 91 Partition Street, Village of Saugerties.

The shop, to be called The Well, will be open each Wednesday and Thursday from 1 to 3 p.m. and Fridays 6 to 8 p.m. In addition to thrift shop merchandise there will be a bulletin board and a listing of all local clergymen.

"An additional by-product benefit," said Dr. Palmer, "is that the scholars from various countries, communions and denominations, who once dwelt apart in their own ivory towers, have learned to work together."

Farm Safety Week . . . Planning Prevents Accidents

"Planning Prevents Accidents" has been selected as the theme for this year's National Farm Safety Week (now until July 31.) Sponsors of this annual observance, the National Safety Council and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, designed it as a way to initiate and promote safety on America's farms and in its homes.

The idea began during World War II as an attack on rural accidents that cut into crucial agricultural production and often resulted in bodily injury and loss of life. The accident prevention fight has continued over three decades and safety emphasis is no less important with today's critical economy and food needs than it was during the days of the war.

Information regarding accidents on the farm and in the home is collected periodically. Some 50 farms in Ulster County were included among the eight counties surveyed in New York State during the 1974-75 year. Five volunteers assisted us in gathering data each quarter for the 12-month period. Fortunately no fatalities or major injuries were recorded on the farm survey in Ulster County.

The national picture for 1974 was most serious, with accidents claiming the lives of more than 5,500 farm residents and causing more than 500,000 disabling injuries. From this summary it is very clear that people must incorporate safe practices in their daily lives if we expect to reduce accidents.

According to the 1974 accident survey one of every five farm accidents occurs in farm buildings where the victim was struck by a falling or flying object. One out of five injuries in the home yard area involved falls from the same level while injuries in the home involved falls from a different level.

Home accidents are a common cause of injury and fatalities especially to children and the elderly. In fact more people are hurt at home than anywhere else. Leading types of fatal home accidents are falls, followed by fires, suffocation and poisoning.

Farmers and homeowners are urged to take spot inventories of possible accident situations and to establish avoidance techniques with the family and workers. Industry has discovered that accidents can be anticipated and thus can be planned against. These same techniques and foresight in careful planning can be used in agriculture just as well.

To help in accident prevention planning, we have a partial list of guidelines one may follow:

- Make accident prevention a major work goal.
- Be informed about safety — Study instruction manuals.
- Homeowners are urged to follow safe use of pesticides.
- Develop and write out a safety plan that suits your operation.
- Inspect equipment and buildings — correct faults or hazards.
- Learn how to cope with hazards that cannot be changed (bag weather, terrain, etc.).
- Rain others to work safely.
- Keep up with federal, state and local safety and health regulations.

THE AVALON
Architects Home Designs

Modern Styling Adds Functional Values

By Jack Mc Eleney

Modern treatment of the ranch house has produced many functional improvements that add to the livability and comfort within. Some of these ideas are expressed in today's feature called the "Avalone."

The designers incorporated several imaginative touches, not the least of which is the arrangement of the sleeping area. The two main bedrooms are more or less average size and the centered rear bedroom has been provided with entries from the kitchen and also from the hall. The idea here is that it will be used for a nursery or child's room, or for a small den.

The theme of relaxed living is apparent throughout the house. Kitchen and dining space has been placed at the rear to permit the assignment of a spacious living room, which these days earns the name of family-room, at the front.

Other features worthy of note is the sheltered front entrance and the location of the basement staircase hall with doors to the exterior and the one car garage.

The length of the house is 50 feet and there are 1,150 square feet of living space, plus 280 feet for the garage and porch.

Complete working plans of the "Avalone" are available at the moderate cost of $28 for the first set and $12 for each additional set by writing to the Associated Blueprint Co., 595 Plainfield Street, Providence, Rhode Island 02909.

Plan books of Ranches, Capes, Colonials, Split-levels and Raised ranches are available for .50 each and a new booklet of past Newspaper features for $1.

Specialists Plan Bathrooms

The kitchen planner is often a bath planner, too, for he deals basically with two things: space and storage. In a kitchen, he uses cabinetry and appliances; in the bath, cabinetry and fixtures to provide the kind and amount of storage you need in an arrangement that uses space to advantage.

As in planning a kitchen, the specialist will check a list of questions with you prior to laying out a bathroom — or remodeling one — for you. He does this because of the obvious manner in which decorating the bath differs from decorating a living room, bedroom or den; you can't change your mind once the fixtures are in.

Gate Usage

A garden gate tells all — more than its owner would like if it sticks open or closed or sags like a rag.

Build it true and sturdy in the first place, for it really isn't much more trouble to do so.

Posts should be 6x6s; if pressure treated they can be of any western species. Sink the ends at least three feet; a concrete collar on the hinge post will add rigidity.

A wood fence calls for a wood gate, but its style can reflect whether it's to be an attention grabber. A curved top edge is one popular profile. Where the fence is built to conceal, the gate can be the same way.

To prevent sag, use the proper bracing. Most gates can be built with a Z-shaped frame of 2x4s. Be sure the diagonal piece crosses from the latch side at the top corner to the bottom corner on the hinge side. And joints must be tight.

Check spacing required by hinges and latch before fixing the gate's width. Generally, the opening should be 1 1/4 inches wider than the gate. Buy hinges big enough.

Members of the American Institute of Kitchen Dealers — 80 percent of whom also plan bathrooms — ask such questions as: how many in the family will use this bathroom regularly? Must it serve as both family and guest bath? What personal care appliances do you use, such as curling comb, facial sauna, hair dryer? Do you prefer to store linens in the bathroom or keep them in a separate closet? Do you wish a shower separate from the tub? A bidet as well as a toilet? A built-in sun-lamp? A vanity base with or without hamper? Do you like to grow plants in the bathroom?

The answers to these and many other questions will determine layout and facilities. Beyond that, there's style to consider: do you prefer ornamental cabinets or simple modern? What colors do you find happiest to live with?

If you are planning a new home, the layout is a matter of placing fixtures most conveniently in the available space. If you're remodeling, the specialist will utilize existing plumbing to minimize the expense of putting in new water supply lines, for example. He may be able to zone the bath for different functions, switch fixtures around, install beams to lower the ceiling, build in a light box above the vanity counter — or even open up a closet next to the bath to expand it.

In short, the specialist — even if you plan to be your own contractor, working from the professional's plans — can open your eyes to new possibilities as well as new products. He'll help you select those which are both practical and pretty, so that while your bath is easy to maintain it's anything but a "plain Jane!"

There are some things that still puzzle me, even after spending more than 25 years in the gardening business.

This spring when my community garden plot neighbor was putting out his tomato plants, I noticed that half were good, robust plants, while the others were smaller. My first reaction was that the plants were of two different varieties, but I was told they were the same and that all plants were started and potted on the same dates. The only difference was that the robust plants were grown in clay pots and the smaller ones in plastic containers.

Then my neighbor asked me why there should be a difference. I confess that I was confused briefly. But after thinking about it for a while, the only conclusion I could come to was that if both were given identical care, the plants in the plastic pots got too much water. There is a different watering technique for plants growing in plastic pots compared with those in clay. Water doesn't evaporate through the sides of plastic pots as it does with clay, so you do not have to water the soil as much.

If all your plants are in plastic pots, this is no problem. In fact, some commercial greenhouses prefer plastic pots because they do not have to be watered as often.

Now, I have been advising people to place pots of flowers and vegetables outdoors for the summer, either on the patio or submerged in the ground (plunged). Because nature will be watering these plants most of the time, I would suggest that these plants be in clay pots rather than plastic.

You can use clay pots year after year outdoors or indoors. Be sure to wash them thoroughly before using again and spray with an aerosol like Raid House and Garden Spray to control any insect eggs or diseases that may be harboring in the pores of the clay.

By the way, Raid House and Garden contains no Freon or other fluorocarbon propellants, which some scientists say may be causing damage to the ozone layer.

Indoors, you may have more control over watering and you can mix clay and plastic. But water plants individually. For our house plants, though, we stick to plastic, and treat almost all plants the same.

It appears that there may be a difference between clay and plastic pots, depending on where they were used. Outdoors, clay or porous wood seems best; indoors, you can use the easy-to-clean plastic pots.

Dear Bill:
Mine is a lawn problem. My soil is quite sandy. What kind of grass would you recommend for a sandy soil way up in the North country?

Joe Feber
Warren, Mich.

Dear Joe:
You can grow one of the cooler perennial grasses in your area. I would try using a blend of seed containing both Kentucky bluegrass as well as one of the newer kinds of fescue grasses. The fescues do well in light, sandy soils.

What are CLEAR SPAN BASEMENTS?

They are a result of a technological breakthrough in home construction. They are obtained by framing the first floor of your home using truss-wall floor trusses. This eliminates the center beam and the unsightly lally columns. The result is a basement which features one big open space area.

Joseph Santoro Lumber Products Inc. is pleased to announce that this advanced system is now basic on all our ranch and raised ranch models. We have homes under construction using this system. You must see it for yourself to appreciate the wonderful difference it makes.

The Hartington features three bedrooms and a separate dining room. It is available through the Help Build program for only $22,950.00. Choice of sidings, storms and screens, oak floors, deluxe kitchens appliances and many other items are all basic. Monthly payments on a $23,000.00 mortgage are $168.00. By Robin Adams Sloan

Q: Was Yul Brynner embarrassed when Variety published that fantastic list of finicky requirements he demands of all his hotel accommodations while on tour? — W.S., Watkins Glen, N.Y.

A: Mr. Brynner probably doesn't know the meaning of embarrassment. Besides shaving his head he has a number of other peculiarities which he stoutly defends as the only way to live. He always dresses in black wears a chain of gold nuggets around his neck and exercises by running backwards.

Q: I thought Brigitte Bardot was going to star in a big new film here in America. What happened? — J.L.P., Montauk, N.Y.

A: Brigitte was a top contender for the leading role of Sharon Fields, the movie superstar in Irving Wallace's "The Fan Club." She was very keen to do the role — but was also determined that the locale should be shifted to Paris and the film made there. Columbia chief David Begelman said: "No way."

Q: What happened to William Manchester, who wrote the controversial book about JFK's death? — F.T., Bennington, Vt.

A: Manchester, 53, has just turned down the offer to do H.R. Haldeman's memoirs, saying, "I don't do that sort of thing and if I did, he'd be the second last person I'd do it for." Manchester's history of the U.S. from 1932 to 1972,

"The Glory and the Dream," will become a TV series.

Q: Why aren't there any more child stars like Shirley Temple? And don't mention Tatum O'Neal — she's no kid. — W.W., Charleston, S.C.

A: People may not be as easily swayed as they were in Shirley's day. However, the Jackson Five is currently grooming young 9-year-old Janet Jackson to take her place among the group. Talent insiders are already calling her "a black Shirley Temple."

Q: I'm going to see my favorite star Tom Jones at the Concord Hotel in the Catskills next month. Just how long is it since his first big hit? — J.F.T., Baltimore, Md.

A: When Tom does his big headline at the Catskills' showplace Aug. 9, he'll be celebrating his 10th anniversary in the big time. It was in the summer of 1965 that the Welsh miner's son won world recognition with "It's Not Unusual."

Q: I see Jill Krentz' name on picture after picture these days. Is she tops at snapping celebrities? — R.T., Queens, N.Y.

A: No, she is simply aggressive and energetic. We'd still vote Dick Avedon king of the photos of the famous. By the way, Avedon, who has missed a few big names in his starchy career, now cites two he won't bother to photograph again — the "self-absorbed" Raquel Welch and the "dictatorial" Barbra Streisand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll put to good use advice from an old friend. At the time she mentions it, she won't realize she's helping you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're extra-ambitious regarding your work today. When you see an opening, you'll start pitching.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your esteem in the eyes of others is far greater than you realize. No need to flex your muscles.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Give family matters top priority today. Unrelated issues can be attended to later, when your mind is free.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll have to make a difficult decision today. It will turn out to be the right one, though it ruffles another's feelings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're far more practical in material matters than you were yesterday. If you make a deal now, you will benefit.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Take the word of someone older you'll encounter socially today. If she passes on information, accept it at face value.

For Monday, July 28, 1975
ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may have a problem getting something important done today. Take advantage of contacts who can pull some strings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your wisest course is to rely only upon persons who in the past haven't let you down. Don't put too much trust in a new principal.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Take with a grain of salt a sure thing a friend will want to let you in on. His intentions are good. The deal isn't.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You will have to maneuver a bit today to protect your interests. Be on your toes. Lady Luck won't be there to help you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't make a hasty judgment on a matter of importance today. If you're wrong, you'll have a rough time backing out.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you have an old obligation to a friend you just haven't gotten around to honoring, this is a good time to clear it up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be careful today you don't make a decision for another without first getting consent. It could cause some hard feelings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Those you associate with today are not likely to be as ambitious as you will be, nor will they be seeking the same goals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The next few days, don't let your optimism overpower your common sense. Deal with big issues on a realistic basis.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're a bit too anxious today to finalize issues. For the sake of expediency you could make some bad moves. Be patient.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You have good ideas today but you're not likely to implement them properly. Don't let others get you off-track.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There are several ways to economize now if you give the matter a little more thought. Be as prudent as your friendly banker.

Proper Packing Cuts Breakage

By Jean Barnes

From the East Coast to the West Coast this summer tens of thousands of families will "move," transplanting themselves and their possessions to a new area before school starts next fall. We live in a mobile society. The chances are great that you will move sometime within the next five to seven years. And, if you are a collector moving is likely to be an anxiety-filled experience.

To make your move less traumatic, we talked with three "pros." Two are dealers who pack and unpack their valuable Meissen, cut crystal and silver wares 40 to 50 times a year. The third is a service consultant with United Van Lines.

The materials you will need include heavy, sturdy boxes, either of wood or reinforced, corrugated cardboard with sturdy lids. "We use chicken boxes from the grocery store," said Dee Cass, Innes, Tex., dealer. These boxes have separate lids and are similar to boxes used for shipping fruit.

Bob Hartsel, Dowagiac, Mich., cautioned against using cardboard because he lost several pieces when the bottom of a box set on a moist floor gave way.

Jean Marney, a moving service consultant, added that most moving companies have packing boxes and materials for sale to those who want to do the packing themselves. And, United has a packing guide to help them.

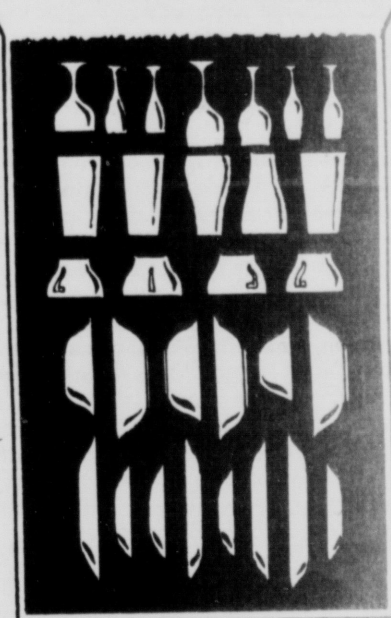

For wrapping individual pieces, both dealers use "hospital diapers," an absorbent pad lined on one side with thin plastic. These are larger than the regular disposable baby's diaper and will cover most things. Cut glass requires some extra precautions, Dee Cass explained. "When we pack cut glass with an open top we put edges face down with a thin layer of foam or a scrap of carpet pad underneath. This is because the least little vibration of the piece will cut through the wrapping." She also recommended care when unpacking cut glass. A sudden temperature change will break it. "Make sure you give it time to adjust to the room temperature before unpacking it," Hartsel also has found that the diaper material protects silver objects from moisture and does not cause discoloration.

Newspaper stock (without print) is an excellent shock absorber if crushed and stuffed around, between, under and over packed objects. All three warned about the staining which newspaper ink can cause and newspapers should never be used as wrapping. Ink-smudged fingers can cause stains on old porcelain or satin glass.

Pack the heaviest items on the bottom. Very fragile items should be wrapped and packed inside a small carton before putting it in with other objects. Tissue paper, paper towels and facial tissues are all good wrapping material for small objects. The three agreed that a "firm pack" was desirable to keep objects from shifting. And, additional insurance is usually worth the investment.

Varicose Veins Need Care

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I am writing to you in reference to my ulcerated varicose veins. I have been bothered with them for years. I had four skin grafts on the left ankle, unfortunately not one taking. I have been told by numerous doctors to use various medications. I have used pressure garments, whirlpool baths, not-warm soaks, ointments, vitamin E and large doses of vitamin C.

The only times the ulcers healed was after I had given up on the doctor, a dermatologist, and took my father's advice. He advised me to use constant elevation from bed to wheel chair for over a month. Two ulcers healed but broke out again when I became active again.

The constant elevation is not for me as I like to be active. I really have a problem. Any information would be greatly appreciated.

DEAR READER—The dilated varicose veins most people have are the superficial veins just under the skin. These cause few symptoms and are more of a cosmetic problem than anything else in most cases.

You also have involvement of the deep veins inside your leg muscles. When a patient has marked swelling and ulcers of the foot and ankle from varicose veins, it means that the deep veins are incompetent.

Varicose veins no longer are able to function to help drain the leg of venous, unox-ylated blood. The blood accumulates literally by running downhill and pooling in the foot, ankle and lower leg, interfering with normal circulation to the skin over these areas. If your feet are elevated the problem won't occur. When you lie down the blood runs out and does not pool.

Pressure garments often work well of at least help some people. It is important that they be used properly. That means there must be enough pressure and localized constriction. And it is better to lie down and have the feet elevated until all the excess fluid is drained out of the tissues before you put them on. That takes some time, so it is best to put on the pressure garment in the morning before you get up.

Skin ulcers will not heal unless the underlying circulation problem and swelling are adequately controlled. When you were using elevation you corrected the basic circulation problem, and the skin healed.

I think you should see a surgeon. He may not be able to do much about the deep veins, but he can remove the external veins under the skin. This sometimes helps because these superficial varicose veins really add to the problem. Each case needs to be evaluated and is different, but if you are a candidate for removal of the external veins it could make it possible for you to get better success with a pressure garment.

Doctors used to think that nothing should be done about superficial varicose veins if the deep veins were involved.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Bullish in Bidding and Play

South bids his hand with all the delicacy of a bull in a China shop. It didn't really matter this time since three notrump was the correct final contract. What did matter was that he played the hand with almost the same technique.

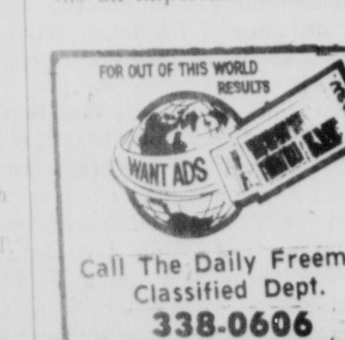

East won the first trick with the king of spades and knocked dummy's ace of diamonds and led a second diamond to his eight West let that eight spot hold, so that North would only be able to take three diamond tricks.

This didn't worry South at all. East had overcalled. East needed the king of hearts for his overcall. Therefore, South entered dummy with the last high diamond, led a heart, finessed his queen and wound up one trick short after West produced the king.

We don't sympathize with South at all. True, East had made a horrible overcall. But when you have a sure thing why not take advantage of it?

South could have cashed his queen of spades in case East had overcalled on a three-card suit. Then he could have led the third diamond to dummy, thrown West in with the fourth one and made West lead a heart or a club to give South his all important ninth trick.

AAUW members have expressed appreciation to all participants, their families and teachers for their contribution to International Women's Year in Kingston.

DIANA TAYLOR

Spotlight on Paltz Girl

NEW PALTZ

The spotlight is on Diana Taylor of New Paltz for her Spotlight story in a national publication.

An active member of Cadette Scout Troop 58, Diana has attended several summer scout events. One of these she tells about in an article featured in the June issue of American Girl Magazine.

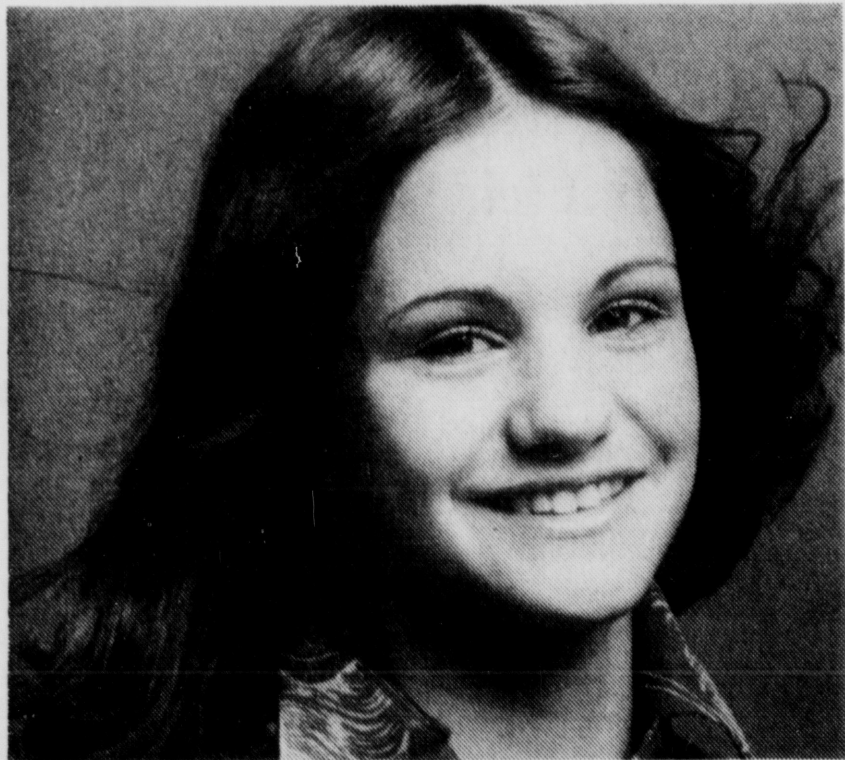

Titled The Spotlight's on You, the article relates Diana's experiences at Spotlight a Wider Opportunity sponsored by the Scranton-Poconos Girl Scout Council in 1974.

Her role as reader contributor to the American Girl Magazine started the previous summer when she attended For Cadettes Only at the Edith Macy National Girl Scout Center, Briarcliff Manor. There she was assigned as hostess to Ms. Carol Bott who was serving as consultant on career opportunities for women.

Ms. Bott is an associate editor of American Girl, in charge of Girl Scout Features. She suggested the possibility of a writing career for Diana and was influential in persuading her to submit the article and picture on her Spotlight experience.

This summer Diana is working as a guide for the Huguenot Street Tour in her historic hometown of New Paltz and could be gathering more material for future articles.

She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Taylor of New Paltz.

KIM CAFARO

Top Honor in National Contest

NEW PALTZ

Kim Cafaro, 14-year-old area girl has just returned from Las Vegas, Nev., where she competed in a national modeling pageant, and was awarded first runner up for the 1975 American Junior Model. In addition she won a special award for compiling the best portfolio.

Miss Cafaro daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cafaro, 180 North Putt Corners Road, New Paltz is receiving her modeling training at Glamour World, Poughkeepsie. She has modeled at the New York Barbizon Hotel and the New York Factoria Restaurant on 59th St. for the World Modeling Association and at the Granit Hotel, Accord.

To further her career she is studying all forms of dance and drama from Estelle and Alfonso and appeared last June in their production of "Annie Get Your Gun". Her busy schedule will include dancing at the Dutchess County Fair in late August, where she will perform in the daily Grandstand Show entitled, "Fantasy World."

Miss Cafaro expects to add more credits to her modeling career when she appears in one of the forthcoming issues of Seventeen Magazine.

Youth in the News — Honors

There are no summer doldrums for Youth in the News what with continuing reports of academic honors and and activities.

Coast Guard Cadet Robert F. Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Martin of 1 Bard Avenue, Red Hook, has completed his second year as a student at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., and is undergoing a summer phase of training.

Upon completion of the academy's four-year curriculum, he will receive a bachelor of science degree and be commissioned an ensign.

He is a 1973 graduate of Red Hook Central High School.

Six students at Ulster County Community College have received scholarships from various organizations, according to announcement made this week by the college.

Dennis Winter of Stone Ridge and Ray Cicarelli of New Paltz have received scholarships from the Veterans Club at UCCC. Winter is a liberal arts humanities major at the Stone Ridge campus. He has returned to college after service in the U.S. Navy. Cicarelli is an electrical technology student having returned to college after seeing service in the U.S. Air Force.

Two local branches of the American Association of University Women have awarded scholarships to students at UCCC.

Barbara Gardner of Saugerties, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gardner, received her scholarship from the Kingston AAUW. She is a liberal arts-mathematics major. She plans to further her education at a four-year college.

Jeanette Humphrey of New Paltz received her scholarship from the New Paltz AAUW. She will be returning to the Stone Ridge campus in September for her second year as a nursing student. She receives a scholarship from the college's nursing department also.

Two business majors received scholarships from the Rondout National Bank. They are JoAnne Coutant of Highland and Donald Policastro of Glasco. Ms. Coutant is an accounting major and Policastro is majoring in business administration.

All were selected by the college's Scholarship Committee composed of faculty and administrators.

College plans are firm for the fall for Todd C. Bennett of 115 Pine Street, West Hurley, who has been admitted as a freshman student in a bachelor degree program at Shepherd College, Shepherdstown, W.Va.

A son of Jack P. Bennett, he was a 1975 graduate of Ontario High School. In college he will major in the study of hotel-motel and restaurant management, a four-year curriculum.

Marlene C. Rua, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Rua of 750 Albany Avenue Extension will be a senior at Ithaca College School of Music when she returns in the fall.

A consistent dean's list student, she was named to the spring semester dean's list with a 3.7 cumulative average. Earlier this year she presented her junior piano recital in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree, Bachelor of Music in Applied Music and Music Education.

She is a graduate of John A. Coleman High School.

TEEN SCENE: Bike Safety Non-Quiz

By Lei

Anyone who's ever taken part in the current cycle boom knows that sometimes the boom is closely followed by a crash. The situations in the following quiz should be far too familiar to most cyclists, and before you begin the quiz remember that there aren't any right answers—it's the questions that are wrong. With a mixture of caution on the part of the cycle riders and courtesy, safety, and good sense from others on the road, these situations should never arise. After they arise, it's too late, really, to do anything but learn from your mistakes—assuming you're conscious!

1. You are riding down a city street. When you are just back of a parked car, the lady in the car opens the car door right in your path and starts to get out of the car. The best thing to do is . . . a) put on your brakes. Maybe you can slow down a little before you hit the door. b) aim for the lady. She's softer than the door. c) swerve out into traffic. Maybe you'll be lucky. d) curse, scream, blow your horn, and after you get out of the hospital, sue.

2. You are riding down the right side of the road with traffic. Before you get to a side road turning off to the right, you check your rear-view mirror. Since nobody is turning, you start across. And a gravel truck turns right in front of you, still without any turn signals on. You immediately . . . a) watch as your whole life passes before your eyes. b) fall off the bike a second before it smashes into the truck. c) hope your last act will be to make a small dent in the truck. d) all of the above.

3. You are pedaling down a deserted country road when suddenly a large Doberman darts out of a hedge and heads for your ankles. You immediately . . . a) stop and pet him. b) toss him a small steak. c) squirt him in the eyes with Mace and leave his unconscious form in the middle of the road for the next car to deal with. d) put your feet on the handlebars and cost until he runs out of steam.

4. You take up cycling for your health. Within your first ten minutes on the highway you encounter . . . a) a sunken sewer grating. b) a pothole c) a broken beer bottle d) all of the above.

5. You are flying downhill in a residential area when out of a driveway in front of you totters a little boy on a spyder bike with training wheels. You immediately . . . a) shout "Look, kid, no bike!" b) lean back in the seat, pull up on the handlebars and soar over him. c) squirt him in the eyes with Mace. d) remember to send him a getwell card while you're both in traction.

6. You are pedaling down the highway when you see, immediately ahead, a drain hole at least a foot below street level. You promptly a) ride right into it, wrecking your bike, and possibly, yourself. b) sue the city. c) fall off your bike d) all of the above.

7. As you ride down a city street a woman walks right into your path from between parked cars. You ought to . . . a) call out "Excuse me please!" b) blow your horn and yell ##&%, why don't you watch where the %'s##& you're going!" c) speed up and hit her as hard as possible. d) swerve around her, get off your bike, and threaten to get her walking license revoked.

8. You are waiting for a red light to change, riding your little sister's rusted Spyder bike with two of the three gears out, when up beside you pull three members of The Toughs motorcycle gang on chopped Harleys. The leader smiles at you—you hope he's smiling—and yells, "Wanna race?" You reply . . . a)

"Hugh? Turn your motor off, I can't hear you." b) "Wait until I go home and get my Honda." c) "Ha-ha-ha-ha!" d) "Did you know my daddy is Chief of Police?"

Margaret McNelis of Woodstock receives high school scholarship award from Grand Knight Gene Smith of Saugerties Council Knights of Columbus as her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McNelis, smile approval. The K of C award goes annually to an eighth-grade student who will be going to a Catholic High School in the fall. Criteria for selection include need, scholastic ability and application essay. Margaret, a member of St. John's Parish, West Hurley, will be going to John A. Coleman High School. James Ross is council youth chairman.

ROLLING STONE :Woodstock Tapes

By Dave March

The Basement Tapes have been a rock and roll legend ever since they were recorded, in the summer of 1967 at the famous Big Pink house at Woodstock, N.Y., during Bob Dylan's reclusive hiatus between Blonde on Blonde and John Wesley Harding. Though some of the songs have been frequently recorded by others, and Dylan tossed in new recordings of four of them on his 1971 Greatest Hits Vol. II, these versions have been previously available only on bootleg tapes of much inferior quality. Appropriately, the official release retains some of the tinny, cellar sound quality: The Basement Tapes are rock's first official bootleg.

But this is not a complete version of The Basement Tapes; only 16 of these tracks feature Bob Dylan at all. The others are by The Band alone, in performances whose existence has never been rumored, but which were recorded at about the same time. While The Band's songs are of extraordinarily high quality — 1967-8 was their most creative period, as it was Dylan's — the inclusion of these songs has resulted in the omission of several important Dylan numbers, most notably the rarely heard "I'm Not There (I'm Gone)" and the celebrated "Mighty Quinn (Quinn the Eskimo)." Still, the lack of those songs only mars the record slightly; it is still a major achievement, masterfully executed.

It is difficult to pinpoint more than the highlights of this album. This is not only the most enormous batch of new Dylan material to be released at one time since Blonde on Blonde, it is also some of the most complex. The eight Band songs alone form a body of work as impressive as any released this year (or anything that group has released since their second album). But it is easy to spot some of the moments of passion, humor and wit which made far cruder versions of these performances legendary. Throughout, the album is dominated by the fantastic interplay between Dylan's voice, which never sounded better or more like the great rock and roll vehicle it is, and Robbie Robertson's slashing guitar, Robertson's, Richard Manuel's and Levon Helm's crisp drumming and The Band's interwoven backing vocals.

As for the songs themselves, there are few real clinkers, though initial listenings makes the inclusion of the previously unknown "Goin' to Acapulco" seem strange, given the exclusion of the majestic, turbulent "I Shall Be Released." The other Dylan rarity — largely unknown in any version — is "Apple Suckling Tree," a gospel-flavored tune with more charm than guts.

The best performances are nearly flawless, though. "Wheels on Fire" is even more searing in this version than The Band's. "You Ain't Goin' No where" is probably the best country-style song Dylan ever wrote; it is certainly one of the most marvelous he ever recorded. The Band's "Yazoo Street Scandal" might be the fiercest rocker they have ever recorded, everything wide open, guitar and drums spitting noise at each other until the parts are obscured by the magnificence of the whole. And with apt wit, the album opens with "Odds and Ends," one of Dylan's best rockers from the period. But odds and ends are precisely what The Basement Tapes are not. "Lost time is not found again," Dylan shouts, but for once, it has been recaptured almost perfectly.

Red Sox Turn Back Yankees, 4-2

NEW YORK (UPI) — Carlton Fisk's two-run single climaxed a three-run ninth inning and reliever Jim Willoughby quelled a ninth-inning New York rally to give the Boston Red Sox a 4-2 victory over the Yankees Saturday.

By winning for the 15th time in their last 18 outings, the Red Sox stretched their first-place lead over New York to eight games in the American League East.

With the score tied 1-1, Denny Doyle opened the ninth with a double down the rightfield line off starter and loser Pat Dobson, now 9-11. Carl Yastrzemski blooped a single that fell between leftfielder Roy White and shortstop Ed Brinkman, sending Doyle to third. Dobson then walked Fred Lynn to load the bases, still with none out.

Jim Rice hit a sacrifice fly to drive in the lead run, and when Bobby Bonds' throw took a high bounce, the other runners advanced to second and third. Fisk then hit a ground ball through the drawn-in infield to drive home the winning runs.

Dick Tidrow came on to relieve Dobson and after allowing two more hits to reload the bases, the Yankees escaped further damage when Rick Burleson, attempting a squeeze play, bunted into a double play.

Boston starter Reggie Cleveland (8-6) had allowed only four hits through eight innings but ran into trouble with two out in the bottom of the ninth when Chris Chambliss walked, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on Graig Nettles' single. Willoughby relieved at this point and after yielding a single to Rich Bladt, got pinch-hitter Rick Dempsey on a forceout to end the game.

The Red Sox opened the scoring in the second inning on a leadoff triple by Lynn and Fisk's one-out double. After Rice doubled with one out in the fourth, Dobson retired the next 14 batters before the ninth-inning Boston outburst.

The Yankees tied the score at 1-1 in the fifth when Thurman Munson and Chambliss opened with singles, Lou Piniella walked and pinch-hitter Ed Herrmann hit into a force play.

Madlock Raps Six Hits, but Mets Edge Cubs

CHICAGO (UPI) — Run-scoring singles by pinch-hitter Joe Torre and Felix Millan in the 10th inning Saturday gave the New York Mets a 9-8 victory over Chicago despite a perfect 6-for-6 by the Cubs' Bill Madlock.

Jerry Grote started the Mets' 10th inning rally with a walk off loser Darold Knowles and Mike Phillips followed with a single. Oscar Zamora was brought in to face Torre, who was batting for pitcher

Tom Hall, and he singled in Grote. After one out, Millan singled home Phillips with his fourth hit and fourth RBI of the game. The hit extended Millan's hitting streak to 19 consecutive games, high in the National League this season.

The Cubs came back to score a run in their half of the 10th on a run-scoring single by Madlock, his sixth hit of the game. Madlock's six hits raised his National League leading average to .356. The last player to collect six hits in a game was Willie Davis of Los Angeles in 1973.

Jerry Morales hit a solo homer in the ninth inning off reliever Tom Hall to tie the score for the Cubs at 7-7.

The Mets had taken a 7-6 lead in the eighth inning when Millan delivered a two-run single.

The Mets scored twice in the first on a two-run double by Del Unser, but the Cubs got a run back in the first on a solo homer by Rick Monday.

After the Mets had taken a 4-1 lead in the second on run-scoring singles by Millan and Ed Kranepool, the Cubs bounced back with two in the second on a run-scoring single by Madlock and a wild pitch by George Stone.

Dave Kingman's solo homer in the third, his 21st of the season, put the Mets ahead 5-3, but the Cubs rallied for three runs in the fourth to go ahead 6-5.

After one out in the fourth, Ray Burris singled, Monday walked and Madlock singled to score Burris. Jose Cardenal followed with a single to score Monday and Morales' double drove in Madlock to put the Cubs temporarily ahead.

Cleon Jones Given Unconditional Release

CHICAGO (UPI) — The New York Mets announced Saturday the unconditional release of suspended leftfielder Cleon Jones following an incident July 18 in which he refused to play after pinchhitting.

Mets' General Manager Joseph A. McDonald made the announcement over the telephone during a news conference following the Mets' game with the Chicago Cubs.

"Having exhausted all avenues in attempting to reconcile the problem, we are offering Cleon Jones his unconditional release," the statement said.

"We see nothing to be gained in going through arbitration procedures. The suspension is being lifted and Cleon will be paid in full. We feel another club will sign him and we wish him well."

McDonald said the Mets had negotiated with three teams for a trade—the Texas Rangers, the California Angels and an undisclosed National League team. He said two of the clubs expressed continued interest but Jones rejected the trades.

Jones, a 10-year veteran, asked for his unconditional release following the incident against Atlanta in New York in which he pinch hit, but refused to take left field and walked off.

The Mets said they had paid Jones off for the rest of the season, including the five games that he was suspended.

Mets' Manager Yogi Berra said, "The basic problem was that he didn't want to go out and play and I don't think I could look another ballplayer in the face if I let him get away with that."

Berra said he had told Jones to go out into the field when he went up to hit. When Jones came back after making the second out of the inning, Berra said he told Jones again to go into the outfield.

When asked what Jones said, Berra said, "He says 'get somebody else, I'm not going out there.'"

Berra, who had said Friday that it would either be "him or me," said, "I think he wanted his unconditional release to make a deal for himself."

Berra said the incident with Jones "put the icing on the cake. I had good a relationship with him. I helped him a lot on a lot of things."

"I don't know what happened, but I know I wasn't going to take anymore."

The Mets also announced they were calling Bob Apodaca from the disabled list to replace Jones on the roster.

The Shadow

Yankee Roy White casts a long shadow in an unsuccessful attempt to catch Boston's Fred Lynn's long fly ball which hit against the left field wall in the second inning Saturday. The hit was good for a triple. Red Sox won. (UPI)

Nicklaus, Brewer Share Canadian Open Lead

ILE BIZARD, Que. (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus and Gay Brewer played par 70 golf Saturday to remain deadlocked at four-under-par after three rounds of the $200,000 Canadian Open, a shot ahead of Tom Weiskopf, who shared the first-round lead with Nicklaus.

Nicklaus had a stroke advantage throughout most of the round over the Royal Montreal Golf Club, but fell back into a tie with Brewer when he missed a short putt at the par-four, 434-yard 16th, after missing the green to the right with his approach shot.

He parred the short par-three 17th and the par-four, 448-yard 18th to match Brewer's round of 70 and 54-hole total of 206 over the 6,628-yard layout on Ile Bizard, 25 miles northeast of Montreal. Nicklaus played the front nine in one-under-par 34, getting his only birdie at the 391-yard, par-four eighth hole.

On the back nine, he had two more birdies, but added three bogeys, including the one at 16.

Brewer, the gray-haired, 43-year-old who has not won a tournament since he took this event in 1972, played each nine in even par. He had two birdies and two bogeys.

Weiskopf, who matched Nicklaus' course record 65 in the first round in the 72-hole event Thursday—but soared to a 74 in the second round—had a scrambling 68 to put him at 207, three-under-par for the tournament. He made two fine recovery chip shots on the final two holes to save par and remain within a shot of the leaders.

Bruce Crampton, who had a 67, the round's low score, was tied for fourth position with Gibby Gilbert, who had a 69, both at one-under-par.

Hubert Green, who had a 71, was another stroke back, tied with Arnold Palmer at even par, in the race for the $40,000 first prize.

Palmer, who started the day one over par for the tournament, gave his huge gallery a glimpse of one of his patented charges on the front nine, when he birdied three holes to take the turn in three-under-par 32.

But Palmer took three bogeys on the back nine, three-putting twice, to finish with a 69 for the day and a 54-hole total of even-par 210.

Palmer said it was "probably as good a round as I've played in some time. But it's getting a little frustrating."

"I just wasted a lot of shots."

"It was pure negligence really."

The 45-year-old Palmer, who won his first professional title in this event in 1955, said that for sentimental reasons he "really would have liked to win this year, and I still would like to."

Johnny Miller, Lee Trevino and British Open title-holder Tom Watson also got their games going again in the third round, all shooting 68s. The 68s left Trevino and Watson at one-over 211, while Miller, who had a disastrous 74 Friday, was another shot back at 212.

Miller, who went into this tournament $129 behind Nicklaus on the PGA money list — $180,799-$180,670—has failed to win since he took an unprecedented three of the first five events on the tour this year.

Pele Not 100%

IRVING, Tex. (UPI) — Pele and friends pay a return visit to the Dallas Tornado Sunday and the so called savior of American soccer says he will play in Texas Stadium despite not feeling up to it.

"I'm not very well," Pele said on arriving in Texas. "I'm not in good shape yet because of my injury (which he suffered last week in Toronto)."

"If this were my second or third time here I would not play. But I believe I need to make a sacrifice because people here have no chance to see me play until now."

Dallas provided the opposition for Pele and the New York Cosmos in the Brazilian soccer king's debut earlier this season. A tie resulted.

Since then Pele has been treated as something less than a king by the opposition.

"The game here is more rough because some referees let the game go and because the defense is man for man," said Pele.

Silk Stockings Favored in Rich Monticello-OTB Classic

SILK STOCKINGS
... Preston Burr Jr. in sulky

MONTICELLO Silk Stockings is the overwhelming favorite to take the richest event in harness racing history, the inaugural Monticello-New York City OTB Classic, this afternoon at Monticello Raceway.

The so-called "Race for the Gold," which has a total purse estimated at $300,000 to be paid in gold bars, will be the seventh race on Monticello's ten-race card.

Silk Stockings has been set at 9-5 on the morning line with Preston Burr Jr. again in the sulky. But while the odds-makers think the filly is the best of the New York-bred three-year-olds in the field, there are nine other drivers and owners not ready to concede.

The principle contender is come in ahead of Silk Stockings once — second to her third when they both trailed Nero. Momentum is rated at 9-2.

Nero is not entered in the race because he is not New York-bred.

Not to be overlooked is J.R. Call, set at 6-1, with George Sholty driving, and Echo Brook Phil, rated the same, who'll have Herve Filion in the sulky. The latter horse is owned by Echo Brook Farms of Red Hook.

The other entries are rated as follows: Tango Byrd, 8-1; Golden Fulla, 10-1; Spirit

Happy, 20-1; and Say No More, 15-1.

The largest crowd in Monticello history is expected to be on hand for the race. Track officials will open the infield for the first time to accommodate the overflow of spectators. The infield will be closed, however, at 2 p.m., so fans are advised to arrive early.

The fourth and sixth races on today's card will consist of consolation events for the 15 eligibles who did not survive last Sunday's elimination races to determine the entries for the Classic itself. Each will carry a purse of $10,000.

The Classic will be televised by Channel 5 beginning at 5 p.m. with Stan Bergstein and Stanley Dancer providing the commentary.

Pacer's Earnings Keeps School Going

NEW YORK (UPI) — A group of kids in Bear, Del., sometimes can't comprehend why Silk Stockings, a long-legged filly, occasionally leaves the farm. They dote over her and feel she's belongs to them.

Dr. Kenneth Mazik, a 35-year-old clinical psychologist, and his wife Claire, a psychiatric nurse, operate a school for autistic children. Two years ago, they pooled their combined salary of $20,000 and purchased Silk Stockings, hoping she could raise the sorely needed funds to continue their school for mentally-handicapped children.

Silk Stockings was an instant success. In 1974, the pacing filly's first season on the circuit, she won 12 races in 18 starts and earned $144,110.

Her finishes this year — eight wins in 11 races — brought Silk Stockings' career earnings over the $200,000 mark, but the filly's big jackpot opportunity is at hand today in the $300,000 Monticello-New York City OTB Classic, a race that carries a $150,000 winner's purse.

"We have 26 children in our school, 10 teachers and a staff of 21 to handle the youngsters' needs," says Dr. Mazik. "We are faced with the overwhelming task of trying to bring their mental age somewhere near their chronological age."

Autistic children differ from the brain-injured or retarded youngsters in that most lack the ability to communicate orally with other people. Mazik's task is to restructure their capabilities and make them useful members of society.

"Some people classify it as hereditary, since 85 per cent of all autistic children are Jewish," Mazik explains.

Mazik at first tried interesting his young people in turkeys, but when it came to killing the birds, the kids drew the line. This indication of a strong drive for survival, led him to by a horse they could groom.

"Prior to our equine purchase, the only association we had with horses was a one-time visit to a race track, where we lost a hard-earned $24," Mazik recalls. "We thought there had to be a better way to make money to support our school."

They bought a $4,000 claiming horse for racing purposes, sold it and bought another. The horses kept getting better and the purses increased.

"Then we went to a yearling sale, where we bought Silk Stockings. We realized $100,000 out of her first year's earnings. Preston Burr Jr. gave up potato farming at the age of 38 to become our trainer and driver and you can see how we've plowed our money back into the program that is helping these kids."

Silk Stockings has paced the fastest mile by a three-year-old this year — 1:57.45 — at Brandywine Raceway in Delaware.

She was rated as the 9-5 choice at Monticello today and the overwhelming favorite of the kids in Bear, Del.

Saugerties, Kingston Legions Even

SAUGERTIES — The third and final game of the Ulster County American Legion championship will be played at 3:15 p.m. today at Cantine Field after Kingston bounced back Saturday night with a 1-0 victory over host Saugerties to even the series.

Saugerties won the opener, 5-1, Friday on a three-hitter by Tim Cole.

Kevin Coughlin and Marco Tiano combined for a three-hit shutout in the second game.

There were only five hits in the entire contest, but Tiano made Tom Crane the loser when he stranded the tying and winning runs in scoring position in the last of the seventh.

Coughlin, the winner, started for Kingston and matched Crane zero for zero through five innings. Kingston broke the ice in the sixth when an error by shortstop Nick Malgieri, one of four the losers committed, allowed Paul Runge to reach safely with one out.

Runge went to second on a passed ball, and when Phil Timbrouck laid a hit to center field, he rounded third and headed for home. Cole, in the outfield for this contest, unloaded a strike to the plate that cut Runge down for the second out. Timbrouck, however, took second on the throw and scored easily as Rich Bell drilled a clutch two-bagger to right center.

Coughlin tired in the sixth, and Tiano came on to mop up. The Kingston reliever was one out away from ending the game when he walked Steve Martin.

Cole came to bat then and hit a shot into right field. Martin crossed the plate uncontested, but the hit was ruled a ground rule double bringing Martin back to third. Tiano then retired Malgieri on a bouncer to short to preserve the shutout.

In the opener, Cole gave up a first inning run to Kingston then proceeded to strike out 15 enroute to a complete game win.

Gary Amato, with five strikeouts in the first two innings, also looked strong. Saugerties tied it up on Bob Cargiolli's RBI single in the third, then went ahead for keeps with three in the fifth.

Poor defense by Kingston paved the way for the Saugerties runs and unsettled Amato on the mound. Mike Meyer worked the final two frames and gave up the final run.

East Germans Set Two Marks At World Swimming Meet

CALI, COLOMBIA (UPI) — Kornelia Ender of East Germany set the second world record of the night in the women's 100 meters freestyle Saturday night when she swam the opening leg of the women's 400 meters freestyle relays in 56.22.

She broke her own mark of 56.38 set last March at a swim meet in Dresden.

Miss Ender, 16, will once again try to break her own mark on Sunday when she swims the 100 meters freestyle individually. She is the overwhelming favorite in that event as well.

Earlier Saturday night, an East German relay team set a world record in the women's 400 meter freestyle relay with a time of 3:49.37, an improvement of more than two seconds over the old mark held by an American combination.

The United States, anchored by 18-year-old Shirley Babashoff, also stayed under its old mark but could not do better than a silver medal with a time of 3:50.74.

The former standard had been set by four American girls at 3:51.99 last year during the East German-United States dual meet in Concord, Calif., where the Germans made off with most of the medals.

Canada was third in Saturday night's race with a time of 3:53.37 and Holland, despite a valiant last-leg effort by Enith Brigitha, the 20-year-old black marvel from Curacao, had to settle for fourth.

West Germany was fifth,

Sweden sixth, France seventh and the Soviet Union eighth.

The East German record relay team consisted of Kornelia Ender, the 16-year-old wonderchild, Barbara Krause, Claudia Hempel and Ute Bruckner. Miss Ender got the Germans off to a fast start and they never lost the lead.

The United States, counter-attacking with Kathy Heddy, Karen Reeser, Kelly Rowell and Miss Babashoff, ran second all the way.

Tim Shaw, the brilliant 17-year-old high schooler from Long Beach, Calif., Saturday night won his third gold medal of the championships, taking the final of the men's 1500 meters freestyle in 15:28.98.

Shaw lost what would have been his fourth gold medal of the Cali meet Friday night when the American 800 meters freestyle relay team was disqualified and had a world record annulled because of an improper change.

Shaw, a shy, bespectacled blond who doesn't look at all like a muscled superman, earlier won gold medals in the 200 and 400 meters freestyle.

He had no trouble in the 1500, the longest distance of the meet, leading all the way. The only question in the race was whether he would better his own world record of 15:20.91, set at the Long Beach trials of the American team for Cali last month.

Shaw was fractionally under the mark at the 1,000 meter mark but shortly after that, a sudden rainshower started descending on Cali's Pan-American Pool and that may have slowed him down.

Brian Goodell, 16, of Mission Viejo, Calif., ran second all the way but the rest of the field was far behind. Shaw had an advantage of more than the length of the pool on the last arrivals.

David Parker of Great Britain got the bronze in 15:58.21. Frank Pfutze and Rainer Strohbach of East Germany were fourth and fifth, Mark Treffers of New Zealand sixth, Igor Evgrafov of the Soviet Union seventh and Max Metzker of Australia eighth and last.

In the women's 200 meters butterfly, Rosemarie Kother of East Germany made a run-away of the final, taking the gold medal in 2:13.82.

Valerie Lee, 18, of Mission Viejo, Calif., captured the second-place silver medal in 2:14.89 and another East German girl, Gabriele Wuschek, got the bronze in 2:15.96.

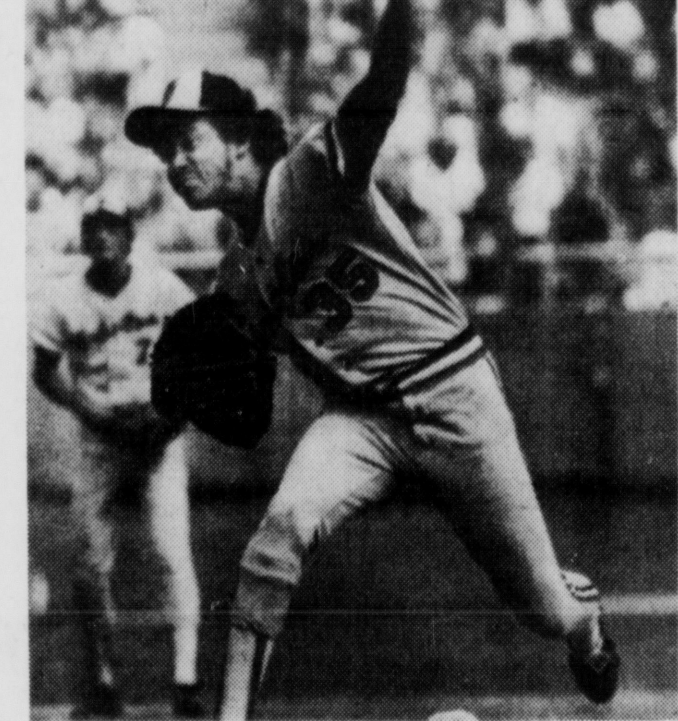

Miss Kother, who earlier won a gold medal in the women's 400 meters medley relays for East Germany and a silver medal in the 100 meters butterfly, led all the way in the race.

She failed to break her own world record over the distance, set at 2:13.76 last month at the East German team trials for Cali in Aitterberg by only twelve-hundredths of a second.

The rest of the finalists were Natalia Popova of the Soviet Union who was fifth, Wendy Quirk of Canada in sixth place, Nira Ostove of Australia in seventh and Becky Smith of Canada in eighth.

Miss Quirk had been following Miss Kother in second place over the first pool length but from that point on, Miss Lee and Miss Wuschek fought it out for the other medals.

Greg Jagenburg, a 19-year-old prep schooler from West Chester, Pa., won the gold medal in the men's 100 meters butterfly race in a time of 55.63.

MIKE CUELLAR

Cuellar One-Hits Milwaukee, 4 to 0

Mike Cuellar's never pitched a no-hitter but he's come thisclose several times, including Saturday afternoon's effort against Milwaukee.

Cuellar fired his second one-hitter of the season—George Scott's seventh inning leadoff single—and fourth of his major league career in pitching Baltimore to a 4-0 win over the Brewers.

The 38-year-old Cuellar, who threw a one-hitter May 31 at California, also had one-hitters in 1969 and 1971. He walked just three and struck out 10 in running his record to 10-6, including eight of his last 10 decisions.

Eldred Hendricks had three of Baltimore's eight hits, scored twice, including the winning run, and drove in a run.

On April 16, Cuellar shut out the Brewers 2-0 on three hits at Baltimore. He is 13-4 lifetime against Milwaukee, 2-0 this year.

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston trimmed New York 4-2, Cleveland blanked Detroit 6-0 and Chicago topped Oakland 5-2.

Rookie Dennis Eckersley threw a seven-hitter for his second shutout and Frank Duffy and Rico Carty batted in two runs apiece with a single and home run respectively to propel Cleveland past Detroit. Eckersley, who struck out 10 in raising his record to 7-3, did not allow a hit until John Knox bunted for a single leading off the fourth inning. He stranded seven baserunners in escaping four jams.

Jim Kaat became the major league's first 15-game winner and Buckey Dent drove in four runs to lead Chicago over Oakland. The White Sox' lefthander, who has lost seven, allowed only five hits but two of them were home runs—by Phil Garner and Gene Tenace. The blows were only the seventh and eighth homers allowed by Kaat in 184 innings.

Dent belted a homer, only his second of the season, off relief ace Rollie Fingers in the eighth inning following a double by Jorge Orta and a walk to Pat Kelly to erase a 2-1 A's lead.

In night games, Kansas City blanked Texas, 7-0, and Minnesota downed California, 9-4, in the first game of a doubleheader.

John Mayberry had four hits, including a two-run double, and Al Fitzmorris hurled a six-hitter for the Royals; Eric Soderholm and Danny Thompson singled in two runs apiece for the Twins.

Pete Rose, who admits to getting keyed up before the television cameras, played the hero's role for the second straight game Saturday when he batted out four hits and scored three runs to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 5-3 triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers in a nationally-televised contest.

Rose, whose three-run homer Friday night enabled the Reds to salvage the second game of a doubleheader with Los Angeles, touched off a fifth inning rally with a single Saturday and eventually scored the go-ahead run on Johnny Bench's sacrifice fly.

Jack Billingham, with ninth inning relief help from Rawly Eastwick, won his 11th game against five losses and the triumph boosted the Reds' lead over Los Angeles in the National League West to 13-1/2 games.

In other National League afternoon games, Montreal defeated Pittsburgh 5-2 and New York edged Chicago 9-8 in 10 innings.

Pepe Manguel scored two runs and drove in another to lead the Expos to victory over the Pirates. Steve Rogers scattered eight hits and walked only one in going the distance to even his record at 7-7. Manguel ignited a two-run fourth inning that gave Montreal a 3-1 lead when he singled home Tim Foli and eventually came around to score on a single by Pete Mackanin.

In night games, Philadelphia beat St. Louis, 9-4, San Diego downed Atlanta, 4-2, and San Francisco edged Houston, 3-2, in the first game of a doubleheader.

Dick Allen drove in three runs and Steve Carlton won his 10th game for the Phillies; Johnny Grubb's two-run homer powered Atlanta; Bobby Murcer doubled in the deciding two runs for the Giants.

Milton Richman, UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The boy's name was Ricky. He was 9 years old, he lived in the Los Angeles area and the doctors who had operated on him for cancer gave him only an 18 per cent chance of living.

His idol always had been Steve Garvey so the boy's parents put through a call to the Dodgers' first baseman and asked him whether he'd be willing to visit the lad in Los Angeles' Orthopedic Hospital. Willing? Steve Garvey was on his way over before he even hung up the phone.

When Garvey arrived with his wife, Cindy, the boy's mother was the only one in the hospital room. No newsmen, no photographers, no tv crew. This was strictly private between Steve Garvey and a 9-year-old little boy afflicted with a dreaded disease which kills nearly three million persons throughout the world each year.

"Good to see you, Steve," the youngster's mother greeted the ballplayer, "but I'm afraid Ricky is so heavily sedated, he can't recognize anybody."

Steve Garvey understood. He moved quietly over toward the bed, looked down at the boy whose eyes were closed and reached for his hand, holding it gently in his own.

"I heard about your operation and I just stopped by to see you," Steve Garvey said, barely above a whisper.

There was no immediate reaction from the boy. Steve Garvey kept on holding his hand.

After a few moments, he felt the youngster's hand growing faintly firmer. Only a bit at first, but then more and more until Garvey realized the boy was pressing his hand as tightly as he possibly could.

Gradually, the boy opened his eyes.

A look of recognition came to his face and, summoning every last ounce of energy in him, he managed a beautiful smile.

This all took place two years ago.

Last year, the ball club had a special night at Dodger Stadium. Crippled Children's Night, they call it, and on such occasions a handicapped little boy or girl escorts his or her favorite Dodger ballplayer to his position prior to the start of the game.

Hand-in-hand, Steve Garvey and Ricky walked out to first base together.

Before that, the boy gave the Dodger first baseman a small silver medal with a tiny figure of a ballplayer etched on one side. On the other was an inscription which read:

"Thank you for giving me the will to live."

To be sure, Steve Garvey is not the first major leaguer ever to have visited a sick youngster in the hospital. Nor was he the last.

Charles J. Tiano is on vacation

Perhaps the only reason to cite this particular hospital visit, only one of a number he has made, was a published story which appeared in the San Bernardino, Calif., Sun-Telegram a short time ago and included a quote from an unnamed Dodger player saying, "Steve Garvey doesn't have one friend on this team."

Even Garvey's wife came under attack, some of the Dodger players claiming "she sticks her face in front of the cameras all the time."

Garvey, the National League's MVP last year, prefers not talking about the story and trying to forget it, but it did upset him deeply. Some of those quoted came to him and apologized, but Garvey thought it best to clear the air and met with the players himself.

He told them maybe he was naive, but he still was going to do everything he could to help them and he still was going to say hello to their wives everytime he encountered them, the same as he has been doing all along.

Putting aside his accomplishments on the field, and they have been considerable since he came with the Dodgers to stay four years ago, Steve Garvey isn't your run-of-the-mill type ballplayer. He has willingly and unstintingly contributed his time and energies to community affairs and to the general improvement of baseball's image.

I don't think I've ever seen a ballplayer more patient with kids, signing autographs for them and trying to counsel them, than Steve Garvey.

Whenever a ball club proves disappointing, as the Dodgers have this season, there always is some unhappiness among the players. They have to grumble about someone or something, and Garvey, as the personification of the All-American boy, emerges as a natural enough target.

Seemingly, he has everything. He's successful, he has a beautiful wife and baby daughter, a fine contract and he never has any trouble with the press. He's in an understandably envious position and it's no more than natural that some of his teammates who came up in the Dodgers' organization with him, and haven't been as successful as he has, might have some jealous feelings about that.

If they have, they should simply try harder to be as good a ballplayer as Garvey is, bearing in mind at the same time envy is nothing more than pure ignorance. Most important, envy doesn't help the Dodgers win any more ball games, and Steve Garvey's teammates certainly wouldn't want that now, would they?

Highland Adds Sports To Athletic Program

HIGHLAND

The Highland Central School District has added four sports for girls and one for boys to its athletic program for the 1975-76 school year, according to Donald C. Baines, chief school officer of the district.

The Highland School Board passed resolutions making provisions for the addition of girls' field hockey, basketball, volleyball and softball and boys volleyball to the athletic curriculum.

this action provides the foundation for interscholastic participation and inclusion of girls' teams in the Ulster County Scholastic League.

The board action followed extensive review by both the Curriculum Committee of the Board of Education and district administrators.

"All but one of the programs is in the area of girls' athletics, thus providing the female student with the opportunity of participation in athletics comparable to that of the male student," said Baines. "..."

Mann Opens Five-Shot Lead

HORSHAM, Pa. (UPI) — Carol Mann, a former U.S. Open champion, tied the course record with a seven-under-par 66 Saturday and boosted her lead after 36 holes to five strokes in the George Washington Ladies Golf Classic at Hidden Springs Country Club.

Miss Mann, who earned $47,720 last year, now stands with a 36-hole total of 12-under-par 134 after opening with a 68. The final 18 holes of the $40,000 54-hole tournament will be played Sunday.

Another tour veteran, Kathy Whitworth, fired a 67, her best competitive round ever, to stand second with a total of 139. Miss Mann, with nines of 33-33, equaled the course record set by Judy Kimball in the inaugural tournament in 1970. In the current tournament, Miss Kimball stands 76-78-154.

Miss Mann said the "greens are putting very well and the pins are in fair positions. This is a fast track."

She birdied seven holes, including the eighth with an 18-foot putt and the 14th with a 10-foot putt.

Miss Whitworth, who earned $52,000 last year, scored an eagle three on the 11th hole with a seven-foot putt after a recovery from the right rough. She birdied five holes, including the 13th and 14th with 15-foot putts each.

"This is my lowest round of the season. I did a lot of scrambling," she said.

Others in contention for the $5,700 first prize include Kathy Ahern at 71-69-140, Donna Caponi Young at 68-72-140 and Suzie McAllister at 72-68-140.

Defending champion Sandra Haynie stands at 71-73-144 and U.S. Open champion Sandra Palmer at 74-75-149.

Muller-Berger to Defend County Two-Man Title

Frank Muller and Jon Berger, winners of the 1974 Ulster County Two-Man Best Ball Championship, will be back to defend their title August 2 and 3 at the Rondout Golf Club.

Auller, recently a runnerup in the Woodstock Open, and Berger put together rounds of 69 and 73 to edge Bill Odeane and George Hughes by one stroke last year. Hughes has since turned professional, but Odeane is back with a new partner, Billy Collins.

Other early entries will be among the favorites, including the twosome of Bill Van Aken and Dave Blakely. Van Aken won at Woodstock last week for the second time in his career while Blakely, a member of the host club, made it to the finals of the Wiltwyck Invitational for the third straight time.

Mike Bruhn and Rick Barthel have paired for the tournament. From Woodstock are Joe Modica and Ross Van Wagenen. Other twosomes set to go are Ted Decker and John Durcan and Bill Brush and Jeff Decker.

Ulster County champion Leon Randall is also expected to appear in the field.

Deadline for entries is July 30, and teams must have a combined handicap of 18 or less. Entry blanks are available at all local pro shops. For further information, contact Dave Blakely (339-3066) or Richard Quick (626-0022).

Cooperstown Preparing For Big Induction Day

Baseball is getting ready for its annual midsummer reunion at the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum, August 18, as five members will be inducted and the Boston Red Sox will oppose the San Francisco Giants.

Earl Averill, Bucky Harris, Billy Herman, Judy Johnson and Ralph Kiner, the newly elected stars will be welcomed into the Hall of Fame by president Paul S. Kerr and Commissioner Bowie Kuhn in the ceremony starting at 10 a.m., in Cooper Park, adjacent to the museum and National Baseball Library. The public is invited without tickets.

The Hall of Fame Game starts at 2 p.m., at Doubleday Field. All seats have been sold out.

The setting for the morning installation has been changed this year, with the platform in the shade, behind the Leatherstocking Corporation

Building facing south. Families of the members and executives are to be seated in front. The new setting provides a better slope of the lawn for the crowd invited to view the exercises.

All the inductees are coming in person, the first time since 1970 that there are no posthumous awards.

Averill, coming from Snohomish, Washington, made more runs, triples, homers, bases on balls, total bases and RBIs than anyone in a Cleveland uniform.

Harris, from Bethesda, Maryland, was front sports page figure twenty-nine years as a manager and was a record making second baseman twelve seasons.

Herman, of Palm Beach Gardens, Florida, the Chicago Cubs' greatest second baseman since Johnny Evers, was a steady .300 batter, playing fifteen years and master of hitting behind the runner.

Johnson, of Wilmington, Delaware, for twenty years was an ace Negro League third baseman.

Kiner, New York Mets broadcaster, led or tied the National League in home runs his first seven seasons.

Many Hall of Fame veterans and families are returning to Cooperstown for the weekend event which has been a yearly fixture since the museum was dedicated.

The San Francisco club is being seen for the first time in update New York. Owner Horace Stoneham who will be present, brought the New York Giants here in 1956. President Town Yawkey's Red Sox played the first Hall of Fame game in 1940 against the Chicago Cubs. This year's opponents trained on opposite sides of the country and have not seen each other for many years.

Jabs Wins Sawyerkill Cup

SAUGERTIES Ed Jabs, a 21-handicapper, fired a gross 79 in the opening round of the Sawyerkill Cup Golf Tournament and cruised home to the title with a 129 net total and a nine-stroke margin over runnerup Bill Freer at the Sawyerkill Country Club last weekend.

Jabs' second round 92 left him with a gross 171 for the 36 holes and still well in front of the field of 31 players which played at full handicap. Freer, with rounds of 93 and 105, scored 198-60, 138 for the second place prize.

Lee Van Tassel put a pair of 85's together and was all alone in third place at 170-28, 142. George Barber, Dennis Beaver and Charles Brown deadlocked for fourth with net 143's. Brown, a 12 handicapper, had rounds of 86 and 81; Beaver, possessor of the lowest handicap in the field, carded 77 and 76 and got to take 1 stroke off; Barber played to a seven and produced 79 and 78.

Bob Kraft shot a gross 168 and finished seventh with a net 144. Al Conte, 173-28, and Larry Thornton, 179-34, tied for eighth at 145. Pete Fischer took the tenth place by posting 146 off 158-12.

At 147 was Harry Szarmach who returned 163-16, and tied for 12th place at 148 were Keith Roberts, 182-34, and Richie Cunningham, 178-30.

Sea Raiders Roll

RED HOOK The Red Hook Sea Raiders scored a 286-206 victory over Spratt Park in the Bi-Valley Swim League to avenge a previous loss and improve their record to 5-2.

The winners took 36 of 57 first places with the boys accounting for 21 individual victories. Liz Fritz improved her victory streak to 21 straight races and led five triple winners for Red Hook. Ann Hoch, Freddie Schultz, Tom Rancich and Brian Reid were the high scorers for the Raiders, and Nancy Longobardi and Mike Mosher added two wins apiece.

Red Hook took a 56-34 lead after the freestyle events and never trailed enroute to reducing the Spratt team's slate to 1-3. Susie Dysewski, Eileen Mahoney and Kelli Deyo tripled for Spratt.

In other Bi-Valley results, Wappingers Falls moved alone into first place with a 5-1 record with a 277-215 win over winless Middletown (0-3); Hyde Park surged into second place as it rose to 4-1 with wins over Pawling and Spratt.

Poughkeepsie carried a 2-1 ledger while Pawling and Salisbury share last place with Middletown.

Spa Meeting Features Sunday Racing

SARATOGA SPRINGS The 108th annual New York Racing Association race meeting at Saratoga — this year featuring three Sundays of racing — gets underway Monday.

The Spa will be open for business on August 3, 10, and 17, in a continuation of the NYRA's new-permanent Sunday racing program started at Belmont Park earlier this summer. The three Tuesdays following Sunday racing will be dark days (August 5, 12, and 19).

Saratoga's 24-day session features 15 stake races, including one hurdle. The highlight of the meeting is the 106th running of the Travers, the oldest stakes race in the United States.

The Travers will be run on the third Saturday of the meeting, August 16, and the mile and a quarter classic for three-year-olds will offer $100,000 in added money. John Greer's Foolish Pleasure is set to run in the Travers and he'll find some new competition as the Saron Stable's Forceten, top three-year-old on the West Coast, is scheduled to come to Saratoga to run in the $25,000 added Jim Dandy on August 6 and then confront Foolish Pleasure in the Travers.

As usual, two-year-olds are featured at Saratoga and there are six stakes for juveniles, three of them exclusively for fillies. The major event for two-year-olds is the $75,000 added Hopeful on closing day of the meeting, August 23, and the filly counterpart of the Hopeful is the $50,000 added Spinaway, Friday, Aug. 22.

While the Travers is the goal for the three-year-old colts, the big race for three-year-old fillies is the $50,000 added Alabama at a mile and a quarter on Saturday, August 9. Except for the Ladies Handicap, which was first run in 1868, the Alabama is the oldest continually run race for fillies in the country. The Alabama was first run in 1872.

The Whitney, on the first Saturday of the meeting, August 2, has in recent years been an allowance stakes but this year has been changed to a handicap and the added value has been boosted from $50,000 to $75,000. It is run at a mile and a furlong for three-year-olds and upward.

The jumpers return to the New York scene at Saratoga and Friday, August 1, is National Steeplechase Day at the Spa. The feature race that day will be the Lovely Night Hurdle Handicap.

Turf course horses also will have their stakes opportunities at the meeting — the Bernard Baruch Handicap on Sunday, August 10; the Diana Handicap, for fillies and mares, on Sunday, August 17, and the Seneca Handicap, August 20.

First post time each day of the meeting, including Sundays, will be at 1:30 p.m. There will be daily double wagering on the first two races, exactas on the third, fifth and seventh, and the Triple on the ninth race.

The National Museum of Racing is across Union Avenue from the track and on Tuesday, August 5, there will be installation ceremonies for newly elected members to the Hall of Fame. The public is invited to the 10:30 a.m. ceremony.

To be inducted into the Hall of Fame this year are trainers Allen Jerkens and the late Carey Winfrey, jockey Laffit Pincay, Jr. and among the horses Ruthless, Carry Back, Shuvee and Stytle.

There will be racing motion pictures at the Museum at 10:15 a.m. every day except on Sundays and the day of the Hall of Fame installation.

One of the features of the Saratoga meeting is the annual sale of yearlings by the Fasig-Tipton Co. The sales, which bring horsemen from all over the world, run four evenings from Tuesday, August 5, through Friday, August 8. This will be the 55th annual yearling sale at the Spa. In addition, there will be a sale of horses of racing age at the Humphrey Finney sales pavilion on Monday, August 11, at 10 a.m.

The first racing at Saratoga was in 1863 at the now training area called Horse Haven. In 1864 racing moved across Union Avenue to the present site, the oldest continually operated race track in the United States. There were five years in this span when there was no racing at Saratoga, in 1911 and 1912 when the so-called Hughes Ban prohibited racing in New York State and during the war years of 1943, 1944, and 1945 when the Saratoga meeting was conducted at Belmont Park.

Consumers Leery of Recovery Predictions

NEW YORK CITY
Consumers are growing increasingly skeptical over the so-called economic recovery process despite predictions that the recession has bottomed out and better times are on the horizon.

Amid the skepticism is the fear that prices for such items as automobiles, televisions, stereos and furniture will rise over the course of the next 12 months.

According to the June Citicorp Survey, a sizable majority of American consumers feel it will take anywhere from one to more than three years for the economy to start improving. This sentiment runs counter to numerous reports from private economists and government estimates that the economy has finally reached the end of the worst downhill run since World War II.

In the June polling of 1,411 people throughout the country, the bank holding company found that only four out of every 10 respondents think that an improvement will take place within 12 months. In May, 42 percent held that belief and in April, 46 percent indicated such optimism.

As in previous Citicorp surveys, it was the people in the upper income categories who expressed most of the optimism on the economic recovery timing. Among upper income groups, 56 percent of the respondents think the economy will improve within 12 months compared to 33 percent of lower income respondents.

Many people in the survey felt the economy actually is worse now than it was six months ago. Thirty-four percent said it was worse, only 23.5 percent said they felt it was better and 41 percent felt it was the same. New Yorkers were more pessimistic than any other group.

According to the survey, slightly more than half of all consumers think that the price of cars, major appliances and furniture will increase during the next year. One third said they feel prices will remain the same and about 10 percent feel prices will go down.

Despite all the pessimism or, what one might call lack of optimism, consumers did indicate they are willing to start spending again.

Close to 10 percent of all the respondents said they would either definitely or probably buy a new car in the next year and 9 percent said they would be most likely buying a major appliance. More than 10 percent said they would probably or definitely buy furniture within the next 12 months.

Asked how they would pay for a new car, 32.2 percent of those who said they would buy one indicated a loan was needed to make the payments.

Almost 23 percent said they would finance the auto through time payments.

The Citicorp Survey is conducted by an independent consulting firm for Citicorp and its principal subsidiary, First National City Bank. Taken monthly, the survey touches on a wide variety of topics relative to all consumers in different wage and job categories and aged 18 to 55 over.

A man can create an estate for his family in one of two ways. The first is to work daily and set aside a fund until such time as it has grown to the desired amount. However, this takes time and all to often time runs out when death occurs and the fund is less than the objective.

The second way is the discounted dollar plan. This is accomplished by creating a fund for $100,000 and depositing annually 2 or 3% of the principle of the fund. If death occurs your family receives the full $100,000 — the amount you planned to save, not just what you managed to save under plan 1.

Additionally, the proceeds received by your family under plan 2 are non-taxable . . . not so in plan one. Does plan 2 sound familiar? It should . . . its LIFE INSURANCE.

Sale of Mammoth Mall Shopping Center

TOWN OF ULSTER
Mammoth Mall Shopping Center, Ulster Avenue Mall in the Town of Ulster, has been sold by Walter Reade Jr., developer of the center, to Arnold Penny and Robert Vegh of New York City, who are operating under the corporate name of Ulster Mall Associates.

The sale price for the multi-million dollar shopping center was not disclosed.

Penny and Vegh operate a number of shopping plazas in the New York-New Jersey area and have "a good track record," according to Dottie S. Hayes, Realtor, who will be the leasing agent for the mall.

Ms. Hayes, who was associated with Phase I of the mall construction, is also associated with Phase II which is now ready for leasing. Ninety-eight percent of Phase I is occupied and 23,700 square feet more of space in Phase II is now available.

The only enclosed mall in the area, it has many facilities including a community room and areas for antique and flea markets, trade fairs and bazaars.

A large variety of stores and shops presently occupy the mall which has parking for more than 1,000 cars.

They include: Mammoth Mart, Weis Supermarkets, Mack Drugs, Fifth Avenue Card Shop, Fayva Shoes, Radio Shack, Protective Loan Company, Marine Midland Bank, Statewide Savings and Loan Association, Mr. Peter's Wig Corner, Crane's Men's Shop, Donna Marie Beauty Salon, Mr. Bagel, Mammoth Mall Wine and Liquor, Arturo's Pizza and Stretch 'N' Sew.

Grimaldi Buick Stays in Kingston

KINGSTON
True to his promise, Frank Grimaldi, vice president and general manager of Grimaldi Buick Company, Inc., is keeping his business in the City of Kingston. He is relocating Sept. 1 at 244 Clinton Ave. in the Chambers Building.

Grimaldi said today he expects the leasing contract to be signed within a few weeks and looks forward to using the new facility which Buick will be leasing from the Chambers estate.

The new location will afford the car agency more space and a completely indoor facility with indoor parking on the lower floor which will accommodate 40 vehicles. The floor above will hold up to 45 cars, he said. The building was formerly used as and automobile agency and garage.

Grimaldi Buick, which has been leasing a garage and showroom at 10 Main Street, just around the corner from his new location, was forced to seek new quarters when its present building was sold earlier this year to the County of Ulster by Conrad Gross.

The county plans to demolish the Gross building and establish a paid parking lot. It will also relocate some of its overcrowded offices in another brick building on the newly purchased property which faces Pearl Street.

Grimaldi first opened his agency in 1972 when he purchased it from Gross.

Two Area Banks Complete Merger

NEWBURGH
Robert F. Macfarland, president of the Highland National Bank of Newburgh, has announced that The National Bank of Orange & Ulster Counties in Goshen has been merged into the Highland National Bank of Newburgh.

Kenneth A. Piggott, former President of the Goshen Bank, has been elected to the Board of Directors of Highland National and will continue to be active in the operations of the bank. Mr. Piggott noted that the affiliation with Highland National will make available to the areas formerly served by his bank the many specialized services now offered by Highland.

As a result of the merger, assets of the combined banks now total in excess of $127 million. Corporate headquarters of the merged organizations will be 385 Broadway, Newburgh, with 12 full-service branches located in key communities of Orange and Ulster counties.

Highland National Bank is a member of United Bank Corporation of New York, a registered bank holding company headquartered in Albany. The acquisition of the Goshen Bank is being accomplished through the exchange of shares of a new class of convertible preferred stock of United Bank Corporation for all the outstanding shares of The National Bank of Orange & Ulster Counties.

Macfarland announced that the proposed merger of The First National Bank & Trust Company of Ellenville into the Highland National Bank of Newburgh is proceeding on schedule; and pending receipt of the necessary shareholders and supervisory approvals, it is hoped that the Ellenville Bank will join the combined organizations in the fall of this year.

Hercules Income Down From 1974

WILMINGTON, Del.
Hercules Inc. today reported first-half net income of $5,768,000, equal to $1.14 per share, down from $51,527,000, equal to $1.23 per share (restated to reflect LIFO inventory method of accounting) in the first half last year. Sales for the first-half 1975 were $669,200,000, compared with $732,500,000 for the first-half 1974.

Second-quarter net income was $1,418,000, equal to $0.4 per share, down from $29,872,000, equal to $0.71 per share (also restated) for the like period a year ago. Sales for the second quarter were $348,500,000 compared with $400,600,000 in the like period a year ago.

According to Werner C. Brown, president and chief executive officer, the high cost of goods sold caused largely by lower operating rates reduced operating profit margins for the quarter to 4 percent from 14 percent a year ago, equivalent to a reduction of $.49 per share, of which $.07 are nonrecurring costs related to plant shutdowns and new plant start-ups. Additionally, nonoperating expenses cost $.05 per share. Profits from operations were $15 million in the second quarter, compared to $3 million for the first quarter.

"Second-quarter results reflected a lower level of foreign business. In Europe, in particular, the business downturn lagged that in the United States; there will undoubtedly be a lag in recovery, too, although we do see signs of increasing sales activities," Brown explained.

"Overall, there are strong trends that suggest, for the most part, the major impact of the worldwide business recession has been experienced and economic conditions will continue to improve in the months ahead. June sales were the highest for any month in 1975 and essentially matched the average monthly sales of 1974. We are particularly encouraged by the signs of recovery in our plastics and synthetic fiber businesses, which had been severely depressed during the winter months," he noted.

Brown said that a major concern earlier in the year was the debt load which had increased sharply as a result of inventory accumulation. However, after peaking in February, the borrowings have been reduced over $60 million, reflecting a more normal inventory condition. These developments have triggered a resumption of many of the capital projects which had been temporarily suspended in February.

"At this time last year, many of our products were on allocation to our customers because of capacity limitations at our production facilities. As many of our new plants and expanded capacities come on-stream, we fully expect to build from the 1974 volume base when the economy resumes its normal pattern."

Another Gewant Line

KERHONKSON
Tom Gewant Ford Mercury Inc. has announced that it has entered into a dealer franchise agreement with American Motors Sales Corp. The sale of AMC and Jeep vehicles will be handled by the Tom Gewant AMC Jeep Division of Tom Gewant Ford Mercury Inc., located on Route 209 in Kerhonkson, N.Y.

Tom Gewant, president, said that he is now taking orders for the full line of 1976

AMC and Jeep vehicles, and that he expects to have the full line on display in several weeks.

Gewant, who continues as an established discount dealer for Ford and Mercury cars, said that he will pursue the same sales policy with American Motors cars. He said he fully intends to live up to his slogan, "The Swiftest Discount Dealer in the Hudson Valley."

Hill Cumorah Is Underway

PALMYRA, N.Y. (UPI) — About 125,000 persons are expected to attend the weeklong Hill Cumorah Pageant which continued last night on a hillside near this upstate New York community.

A brisk wind provided a rustling backdrop for the nation's most elaborate religious festival for its opening Friday night.

An estimated 20,000 persons viewed the pageant the opening night and about 125,000 are expected to see it by the time it concludes Aug. 2.

A sophisticated array of sound and lighting equipment, capable of producing such dazzling effects as Christ's seemingly mid-air descent from the hilltop enhance the presentation.

Dr. Harold Hansen, a Brigham Young University drama professor, has directed the pageant since its original 1937 six-man performance. A theater veteran, he calls the pageant "an overwhelming responsibility" and says the "experience at Hill Cumorah is unlike anything that I have had in any of my other experiences in theater."

The performers must pay for their own transportation, food and lodging and Hansen says many of them "save carefully for a year or two years or more to make this trip."

According to Mormon tradition, a young Joseph Smith climbed the hill in 1825 and was given a set of gold plates. Smith, was later to become the church's first president, transcribed the plates into what later became the Book of Mormon. The Book and the Bible form the basic tenets of the group, which has some 3.3 million members worldwide.

Going Out in Style

Cadet Bruce Fritzsche of Holland Park, Ill., didn't graduate with the rest of his class on June 4 because he had to complete a couple of summer courses. He graduated Friday instead — all by himself — in Falcon Stadium at the Air Force Academy in Colorado. "I want to go out in the same manner my classmates did," said Fritzsche, as he sat watching a "fly-over" consisting of a sailplane (glider). The big moment came when Lt. Mike Mark shouted: "Lt. Fritzsche, you're dismissed." Fritzsche's hat went sailing into the wild blue yonder.

Murder Charges Are Dropped Against Pair in Ellenville

ELLENVILLE — While not commenting officially on the possibility of the two exonerated men testifying before a grand jury, Gruner said they would "certainly be considered relevant witnesses for a jury trial."

In other action, investigation by Kingston City police and the Ulster County Sheriff's Department led to the arrest Friday night of James Stile, 19, of Towpath Road, Accord, who was charged with third degree burglary, first degree possession of a controlled substance (narcotics), and 10 drug and weapon charges, including possession of a weapon third degree (gun) and criminal defacement of a weapon (filing off numbers).

Stile was taken into custody in connection with a July 22 burglary at the Hy-Way Pharmacy, Route 32, Rosendale, which was entered through a hole in the roof. Police said that about $1,000 in cash and another $2,000 worth of narcotics were taken by burglars.

Stile was arrested when he appeared before Town of Rochester Justice A. Brian Lawrence on an unrelated charge. Making the arrest were Lt. Arthur Nersesian of the Ulster County Sheriff's Department and Det. Lt. Charles McCullough and Sergeant Joseph Feraca Jr. of the Kingston Police Department.

Stile was arraigned before Lawrence, who ordered him confined to the Ulster County Jail without bail for a later appearance.

Police said that Stile had fled on foot from a Kingston motel the morning after the burglary occurred. The entire stock of narcotics taken from the Rosendale pharmacy was recovered at that time, police said.

Investigation into the burglary is continuing.

Meanwhile, Woodstock Police, together with volunteer firemen and a fire observer, aided in removing the body of Eugene Howland, 56, of Lake Hill from the vicinity of Echo Lake on Overlook Mountain where he had been camping. Police said he apparently died of natural causes about noon, Friday. Ulster County Coroner William Keyser also responded.

And on Main Street (Route 23B) in Leeds early Saturday, state police from Leeds arrested Mary Ann Ripp, 30, of Howard Beach, N.Y. for driving while intoxicated after her car reportedly precipitated a six-car collision, running into one car which carried through to four more, and ultimately smashed through the window of a liquor store. There were no injuries. Ms. Ripp was arraigned before Town of Catskill Justice George Carl and placed in Greene County Jail in lieu of bail.

Demonstrations Loom in Portugal

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Portugal's two major political parties threatened Saturday to demonstrate in the streets against the creation of what some observers called a Communist-inspired military dictatorship.

Military security forces were ordered to stay near their posts to put down possible violence and politicians said the decision to set up a Soviet-style three-man leadership could only aggravate the country's 10-day-old political crisis.

The left-of-center Popular Democrats said they would hold at least three major weekend rallies, and the Socialists held emergency meetings to discuss similar moves.

Both parties—the country's biggest vote-getters in recent elections — stressed demonstrations would be peaceful. But they said they would be unable to control possible violent outbursts among the military and their Communist allies.

The military's 240-man Assembly Friday turned over power to Communist-backed Prime Minister Vasco Gonçalves, President Francisco da Costa Gomes and military security chief Gen. Otelio Saraiva de Carvalho, an ultra-leftist.

Costa Gomes, who had warned earlier in the day that the military leaders might be losing touch with the Portuguese people, was considered the most moderate of the three.

The midnight decision came after 14 hours of heated debate and represented a victory of the radicals in the military leadership over the moderates.

"There is no hope now. The people must show they are opposed to communism and military dictatorships," one politician said.

Another said the Portuguese people were "fed up with the military and Communists dictating how they should run their daily affairs."

The Popular Democrats said they were "apprehensive about the orientation that the Assembly has tried to impose on the Portuguese revolutionary process."

At least five leading moderate officers boycotted the Assembly's session in open opposition to the accelerating leftward swing of the country. Two of these men—Foreign Minister Maj. Melo Antunes and Adm. Vitor Crespo—have large personal followings in the army and navy.

The current crisis began when the Socialists and Popular Democrats pulled out of the coalition cabinet to protest the refusal of the military to guarantee basic freedoms.

Actress, Boyfriend Are Shot to Death

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The slaying of actress Barbara Colby, former daughter-in-law of entertainer Ethel Merman, and her boyfriend was apparently not linked to a series of three separate street attacks during a violent 40 minute period late last week, police said Saturday.

Miss Colby, 36, who was making her major television debut with a feature role in the new CBS series Phyllis, was killed as she walked to her car with actor James Kiernan, 36.

"Because of the time element, the similarity of the crimes and the close proximity, we were working on the possibility that perhaps the crimes were in some way connected," said Sgt. Fred Boyette of the Venice Division police.

"But as the investigation digs deeper and deeper," he said, "that appears unlikely now."

"But we are still not eliminating the possibility that the crimes are related," he said.

Six youths were arrested on suspicion of robbery and questioned about the slayings. Two of the suspects were released on $5,000 bond each, and four remained in custody.

Police said Miss Colby and Kiernan had completed an acting class taught by the actress and were standing in a parking lot in the Venice area when they were shot just before midnight last Thursday. Miss Colby was killed instantly, and Kiernan died early Friday at a nearby hospital.

Before he died, Kiernan told police he had been shot by two blacks driving a light colored van. Neither victim was robbed.

Forty minutes before the Colby-Kiernan slayings, and only a short distance away, the wife of a Lockheed Aircraft executive was killed during an attempted robbery.

At 11:10 p.m. Roland and Gloria Witte and John and Nancy Hudson were dropped off at the Hudson's Santa Monica home. A few moments later Mrs. Witte, 57, was dead.

Three armed, masked bandits confronted the couples and ordered them to lie spreadeagled on the ground. Police said Mrs. Witte apparently panicked and began running. She was hit in the back by at least two bullets and died in the street fronting the Hudson home.

The robbers rifled the pockets of the other three victims and fled in a light-colored van.

A few minutes later and a few blocks away, six men in a van confronted two couples in West Los Angeles, threatened to kill them and forced them into the house where one of the men was kicked and the women were molested.

The victims were tied up before the robbers left fled with an estimated $5,300 in cash and jewelry.

Blanche Gains Strength

MIAMI (UPI) — A weather disturbance off the North Carolina coast grew into tropical storm Blanche Saturday, roughing up shipping lanes but posing no immediate threat to land areas.

Another tropical depression was swirling in the Gulf of Mexico and moving toward a landfall near Tampico, Mexico later Saturday.

Blanche, packing sustained winds of 45 miles an hour with gusts to 55 m.p.h. was headed northeast, away from the coast. But forecasters warned it could slow down and become troublesome for boaters and shipping interests off North Carolina.

Small craft from Cape Lookout to Virginia Beach were advised to stay near port.

By 3 p.m. EDT, the depression in the Gulf of Mexico was "very near" Tampico and generating 35-40 mph winds. The map coordinates were 22.4 degrees north latitude and 97.8 degrees west longitude.

Iran Lists Deficit

KUWAIT (UPI) — Iran, the world's second largest oil-exporting country, has a $4 billion deficit, the Shah said Saturday.

In an interview with the newspaper Al Siyassah, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi said the deficit was due to the drop in oil production, rising prices of industrialized goods, the decline of the purchasing power of oil revenue, and Iran's ambitious economic development program.

"My country has asked for loans to cover this deficit which will affect Iran's investments abroad and the volume of aid we extend to poor nations," he said.

The Shah, who had earlier predicted a rise in world oil prices, refused to discuss the question which, he said, will be decided by the ministerial council of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Vienna in September.

On the Middle East conflict, the Shah said time was not in Israel's favor "because the 100 million Arabs can acquire progress and the necessary weapons and withstand human losses — a matter which Israel cannot afford."

The Shah said he was prepared to withdraw his troops from Oman immediately if Sultan Qabus requested this.

Asked about recent threats by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy to intervene militarily in Oman unless Iranian troops were withdrawn, the Shah said Khadafy was a "capricious man."

"Khadafy will not be able to use the (Soviet) weapons, for which he squandered his people's money, for another 20 years," the Shah said.

Several hundred Iranian troops have been in Oman for the past two years to help the Sultan's war against Marxist rebels of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Oman.

Evangelist Comments On Vietnam

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — Evangelist Billy Graham says he believes the United States may have helped pave the way for the Communist conquest of South Vietnam by corrupting the nation with its culture.

"I think that the American culture that we imported to South Vietnam tended to corrupt the people," Graham said in an interview with UPI. "Religious leaders in Vietnam have emphasized this to me time after time."

Although Graham has called events in South Vietnam a "human tragedy" and has appealed for private aid to refugees, this was the first time he publicly blamed American culture for a part in the April 17 Communist victory.

Graham, in Brussels for an evangelical crusade and a youth Bible study conference, also said Friday the West could profit by observing how Communist governments deal with problems of morality.

"In terms of sexual morality, the Communists are teaching us some lessons wherever they take over," he said. "They close down brothels, eliminate prostitution, and eliminate pornography."

Ferry Rate Hiked

NEW YORK (UPI) — For almost 80 years a ride on the Staten Island Ferry was one of the most inexpensive fresh air excursions available.

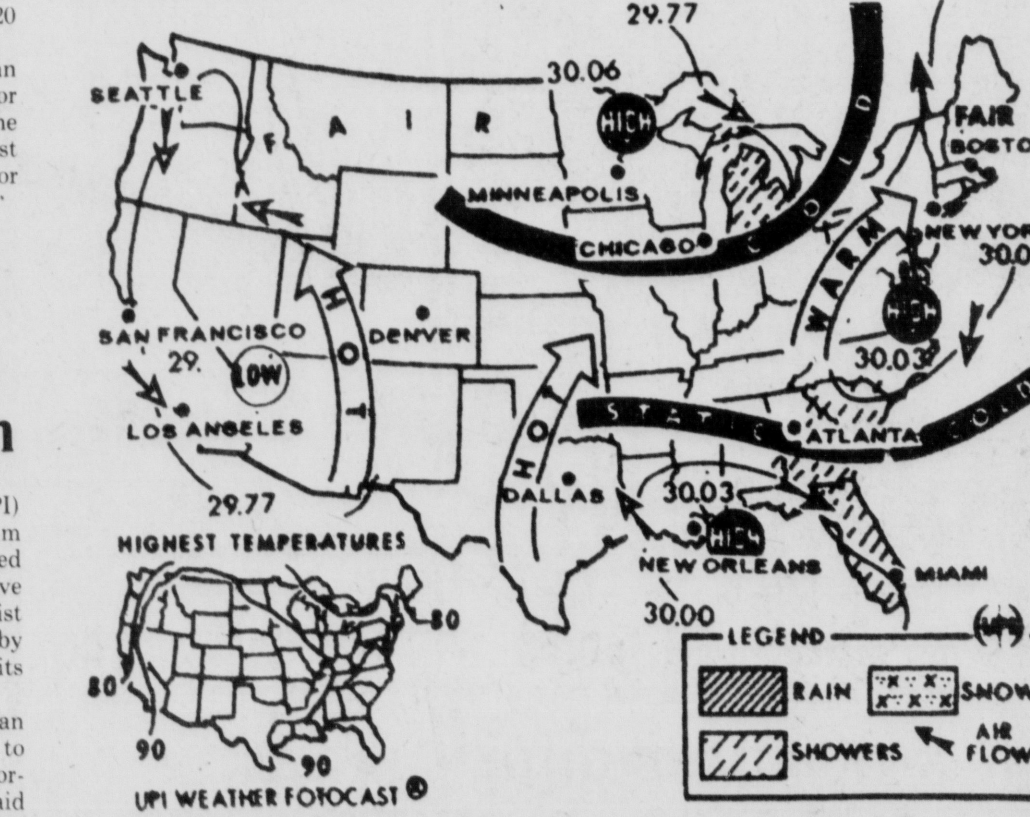

The ferry carried commuters, river buffs and tourists past The Statue of Liberty, Ellis and Governors Islands and gave them a breathtaking view of the New York harbor.

The ferry fare was set by law at 10 cents a roundtrip in 1897 — a bargain by any standard.

But now the dime fare has fallen victim to inflation and the New York City's fiscal crisis.

The City Council Friday night voted 34-2 to okay a measure to raise the traditional fare on the ferry to 25 cents for a round trip.

Mayor Abraham Beame is expected to sign the fare increase by next Friday and it will go into effect immediately. Councilwoman Carol Greitzer, head of the Council Committee on Mass Transit, said Saturday a proposal by Beame to increase bus and subway fares would "sound the death knell" for mass transit.

Simpson Funeral Home, 411 Albany Avenue, at 9 a.m. Tuesday, thence to the Church of the Holy Name of Jesus, where at 10 a.m. a Mass of the Resurrection will be offered. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery. Friends may call at the funeral home today 7-9 and Monday 2-4 and 7-9 p.m.

Hofmann

Elsie L. Hofmann, 88, of Route 28-A, West Hurley, died Saturday morning in Kingston Hospital. Born in Switzerland on Sept. 28, 1886, she had resided in West Hurley since 1922. Her husband, Gustave Hofmann, died in 1958. Surviving is a daughter, Mrs. Frank (Elsie) Cable, of West Hurley; a son, Max Hofmann of Zena; and several nieces and nephews. The funeral will be held at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Lasher Funeral Home Inc., Woodstock. Burial will be in the Woodstock Cemetery. Friends may call at the funeral home Monday from 2-4 and 7-9 p.m.

Howland

Eugene Howland, 56, of Lake Hill, died suddenly Friday while camping at Echo Lake, Town of Woodstock. Born in Shady, on Dec. 17, 1918, he was a son of the late Oscar and Emma Hicks Howland. He was self-employed as an excavating contractor in Woodstock. He served in the merchant marine during World War II and was a member of the Wittenberg Sportsmen's Club. Surviving are his wife, the former Phyllis Van Wagenen; three daughters, Mrs. Donald (Eva-May) Park, of Woodstock, Miss Brenda Jean Howland and Miss Laurie Rose Howland, and brother of Mrs. Arthur Gray, Mrs. John Klages, Mrs. Lloyd Moore, Mrs. Arthur Kelly, Mrs. Walter Maier, Mrs. Joseph Sapone, Roger, David, Barnet, John, and Leon Howland. Also surviving are nieces, nephews and uncles.

DALEY — Jennie (nee) Lowe of 4163 Old Stage Road, Saugerties on July 25, 1975. Wife of the late William Daley, mother of Mrs. Claire Hulst, Vincent and Arthur Daley, sister of Mrs. Kathleen Bell, eight grandchildren, five great grandchildren and several nieces and nephews also survive.

Reposing at the Frank H. Simpson Funeral Home, 411 Albany Ave. Funeral services will be held on Monday at 11 a.m. Burial in Mt. Marion Cemetery. Friends may call Sunday 2-4 and 7-9 p.m.

Card of Thanks

Our sincerest and heartfelt thanks to our many friends, neighbors and relatives — to the staff and nursing service dept. of Benedictine Hospital, Kingston Fire Dept., Post Office employees, Halpern Mfg. Co. employees, V.F.W., and very special thanks to the employees and administration Dept. of the Dept. of Public Works, for their kindness, understanding and sympathy during the time of our bereavement in the loss of our beloved husband and father — Walter J. Dart. We shall never forget how wonderful people really are in the time of need.

Mrs. LKathryn Dart Francis Dart & family Carolyn Munson (Dart) & family

PURDY — Diana DeAngelis of 32 DeWitt St. on July 25, 1975. Daughter of Mrs. Margaret A. DeAngelis Purdy, stepdaughter of Donald Purdy, sister of Rhonda, Donald, Laura, and Robert Purdy, granddaughter of Mrs. Margaret DeAngelis and Mrs. Elizabeth Purdy. Several aunts, uncles, and cousins also survive.

Funeral services Tuesday 11 a.m. at the Lasher Funeral Home Inc., Woodstock. Interment Woodstock Cemetery. Friends may call at the funeral home Sunday 7-9 and Monday 2-4 and 7-9 p.m. Memorial donations to the Wittenberg Sportsmen Club would be appreciated.

Reposing at the Frank H. Simpson Funeral Home, 411 Albany Ave. Funeral will be held on Tuesday at 9 a.m.; thence to Church of the Holy Name of Jesus, where at 10 a.m. a Mass of the Resurrection will be offered. Burial in St. Mary's Cemetery. Friends may call Sunday 7-9 and Monday 2-4 and 7-9 p.m.

Fawns Help Each Other

For the past Month, since their mother was killed by a car, Flora and Fawn, two month old twin fawns, have been living alone on a small grassy island off the westbound Thruway lane Exit 39 ramps near Syracuse. The State Department of Environmental Conservation is now looking into the matter of relocating the fawns away from the heavily traveled Thruway. (UPI)

Senate Favors Veto Override

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford vetoed a $2 billion federal health care bill Saturday and the Senate, meeting in rare weekend session, quickly voted 67-15 to override.

The overwhelming vote — the first in this year's heavily Democratic Congress to go against a Ford veto — came only hours after the White House announced the move and as the President flew to Europe for a 10-day visit.

The tally was 12 votes more than the two-thirds majority required by the Constitution to override a presidential veto.

The House must now vote on overriding, which would make the bill law over Ford's objections to its high cost.

The health bill includes aid to community programs, training for registered nurses, medical aid to migrant workers and federal programs on hemophilia, Huntington's disease, rape prevention and treatment of hypertension.

Republican and Democratic senators took to the floor to denounce the veto and call for the override.

"This is just as essential to the security of the country" as a $31 billion weapons bill agreed to in a House-Senate conference Friday, said Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y.

It was Ford's 9th veto of the year. In four earlier votes — all of them in the House — the vetoes were upheld. No votes have been taken on the others, including a $7.9 billion aid to education bill vetoed Friday.

Ford has vetoed 36 bills since he took office last August.

For a bill to be enacted into law over the President's opposition, both House and Senate must override a veto. The house which originates the bill is the first to vote, and on the four earlier attempts the Senate never voted because the House voted first and failed to override.

Ford said the high cost of the health bill "could not be tolerated" by an overloaded federal budget and some of the programs would duplicate existing health efforts.

The bulk of the bill would have provided $1.4 billion for health services and health revenue sharing programs which give grants to states for projects such as community mental health centers, migrant health and other programs.

The 200,000-member American Nurses Association denounces the veto as "incomprehensible," saying it would have very serious effects on nursing schools around the country.

But Ford said in his veto message that the nursing school programs "have outlived their usefulness" because of a spurt in nursing degree programs around the country between 1970 and 1974.

He specifically pointed to $30 million for the treatment of hypertension, $17 million for rape prevention and control, $10 million for home health demonstration agencies, and $16 million for hemophilia treatment and blood separation centers.

Astros Anxious For Home

HONOLULU (UPI) — The last three Apollo astronauts, released from intensive care hospitalization and apparently free of lung inflammation from the poisonous gas they breathed in their spaceship, said Saturday they were "anxious to get on the road" toward a delayed return home.

Thomas Stafford, Vance Brand and Donald "Deke" Slayton met briefly with reporters at the Tripler Army Hospital in Honolulu, where they were placed in the intensive care ward Friday after the recovery ship New Orleans reached Hawaii.

"We all feel much better," Stafford said. "It's good to be out of the intensive care place, even though it was just for monitoring purposes. We're anxious to get on the road."

Dr. Arnauld Nicogossian, a space agency lung specialist, said in a medical bulletin issued at 6:30 p.m. EDT that all three astronauts appeared free of pain and coughing — symptoms of the potentially dangerous lung inflammation they suffered Thursday from breathing strange yellow fumes in their spaceship.

The crew will be kept under less intensive observation at the hospital for another 24 to 48 hours, Nicogossian said, but "general crew health status is satisfactory."

In Houston, meanwhile, the space agency released the first sharp color photographs taken in orbit by the astronauts of the Russian Soyuz spaceship and two Soviet cosmonauts with whom they flew for two historic days.

Engineers at the Houston space center labored through the weekend studying air filters and data tapes from Apollo to learn the nature and source of the yellow, sharp-smelling fumes that filled Apollo during the final minutes of its descent and forced hospitalization of the crew.

Stafford, Brand and Slayton seemed a bit subdued as they talked to reporters at the hospital, but they were obviously anxious to get home to the reunion with families and friends in Houston they originally expected to have early Saturday morning. "You can't find a better place to relax than Hawaii, can you?" Stafford said.

"Yep, it's nice to get out in the sunshine and see a little scenery from sea level instead of 150 miles. It's pretty hard to beat it up there, but it looks pretty nice from here, too, today," Slayton said.

"It's really nice out here," Brand said. "The people have really been nice to us here — so nice it almost makes you want to stay on, but we have to get back and do some debriefing on the flight before we forget all about what the flight was about."

"So it looks like we'll be pressing on as soon as we can whenever the doctors say we can press on."

"We're anxious to get back and see what all the films look like and what all the TV looks like that we shot up there," Stafford said. "We had a great mission, and now we want to see some of the results of it."

Nicogossian's report on the crew's health was the most favorable issued since splashdown.

Israeli Sources See 'Gap Widening'

Israeli government sources said Saturday there may be no new interim peace agreement between Israel and Egypt until at least September or October. Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, visiting Sudan, urged that the momentum toward peace be maintained.

In Tel Aviv the Israeli government radio said: "The gap between the two sides widened in the last few days, and there is reason to believe Egypt will stiffen its position in the future."

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin struck a similar cautionary note in a television interview Friday night.

"I should like to suggest that the public at large accept the fact that negotiations are apt to be lengthy," Rabin said. He called the latest Egyptian proposal "substantially not acceptable."

Rabin called Egypt's initial reluctance to renew the mandate of a U.N. emergency force patrolling the cease-fire lines in the Sinai desert "threats with an empty gun."

The mandate, which was to have expired July 24, was renewed at the last minute for three months, as Egypt requested, instead of the six-month term suggested by Israel.

The latest Egyptian proposal, as relayed from Washington, turned down Israel's demand for maintaining footholds at the eastern ends of the

Gidi and Mitla passes and also rejected a joint U.S.-Israeli electronic warning system overlooking the cease-fire lines, Israeli government sources said.

Sadat arrived in Khartoum Saturday for a one-day visit and talks with Sudanese President Jaafar Numeiry. Sadat was to leave today for Kampala to attend the summit conference of the Organization of African Unity opening Monday.

Commenting on his meeting in Cairo Friday with U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, Sadat told newsmen in Khartoum: "I made it clear that the presence of the U.N. forces (in the Sinai) was not aimed at sanctioning a situation which Israel wants to continue but at ensuring an opportunity for making progress toward peace."

"These troops are not part of a peace agreement, so that Israel may exploit their presence," Sadat said. "The momentum toward peace should be maintained." Waldheim, leaving Cairo for Kampala, told newsmen he expected the next three months to determine the turn of events in the Arab-Israeli conflict. He warned if there was no progress "there will be a very critical situation towards the end of this year."

All-Out War Looms in Angola

LUANDA, Angola (UPI) — Angola National Front troops marched toward the capital Saturday in a bid to recapture it from forces of a rival black nationalist movement. Diplomats said the situation was developing into all-out war.

A Portuguese military spokesman said Front troops and soldiers of the Soviet-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola clashed Saturday at Sassa, a village about 27 miles north of Luanda, the capital.

The Front took the strategic road and rail junction town of Caxito, about three miles further north, Friday.

The spokesman had no information on the strength of the Popular Movement's defenses but described the Front's southward march as "well coordinated." Army sources said the Popular Movement had been largely cut off from reinforcements.

Angola is scheduled to achieve independence from Portugal Nov. 11, ending five centuries of colonial rule.

The National Front and the Popular Movement, along with the more moderate Angola National Union, formed an interim administration early this year. But the coalition fell apart in February and thousands have been killed in clashes between the two main groups since then.

Holden Roberto, president of the Front, said in a radio broadcast Friday he was declaring war on the Popular Movement "as an organ of Soviet imperialism." Roberto said he is leading his Front troops in their advance on the capital.

Roberto urged Portugal to keep its 15,000-man force in Angola on the sidelines "to avoid unnecessary bloodshed." Portuguese military spokesmen said earlier in the week they would not allow the Front to march unimpeded on the seaside city.

In a news conference at a meeting of foreign ministers of the Organization of African Unity in Kampala, Uganda, a spokesman for the Front said the Soviet Union was pouring missiles and armored vehicles into Angola for use by the Popular Movement. The spokesman said the Front would not accept a cease-fire until it had retaken its lost positions in Luanda.

The Popular Movement drove the National Front out of Luanda two weeks ago in six days of bloody street warfare in which at least 300 persons died and more than 1,500 were injured.

The palm-lined center of Luanda was calm but shopkeepers reported housewives were hoarding basic food supplies against the possibility of a civil war creating shortages.

Western diplomats said there appeared no hope for a permanent peace in the oil and mineral-rich West African nation. The rival movements signed seven peace treaties this year and broke them all, the latest on July 24.

Student Freed

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — Marxist guerrillas freed unharmed Stanford University graduate student Stephen Smith for a secret ransom Saturday, ending his 67 days of captivity in the jungles of the African nation of Zaire. "I don't know what to do," the 22-year-old graduate student said after he arrived in Dar Es Salaam aboard a chartered airliner wearing dungarees, a T-shirt, and a 10-week beard. "I've never been famous before."

Smith, of Garden Grove, Calif., was released at midnight near the Tanzanian town of Kigoma, where his 61-year-old father, Joseph, had been waiting for him for six weeks, U.S. Embassy officials said.

He was the last of four students to be freed by the guerrillas, who seized the group May 19 at a wildlife research station operated by British anthropologist and author Jane Goodall on the Tanzanian side of Lake Tanganyika.

An attempt to free Smith last month went awry when Tanzanian government vessels opened fire on a vessel carrying him to an agreed-upon site for the release.

Bavarian Festival:

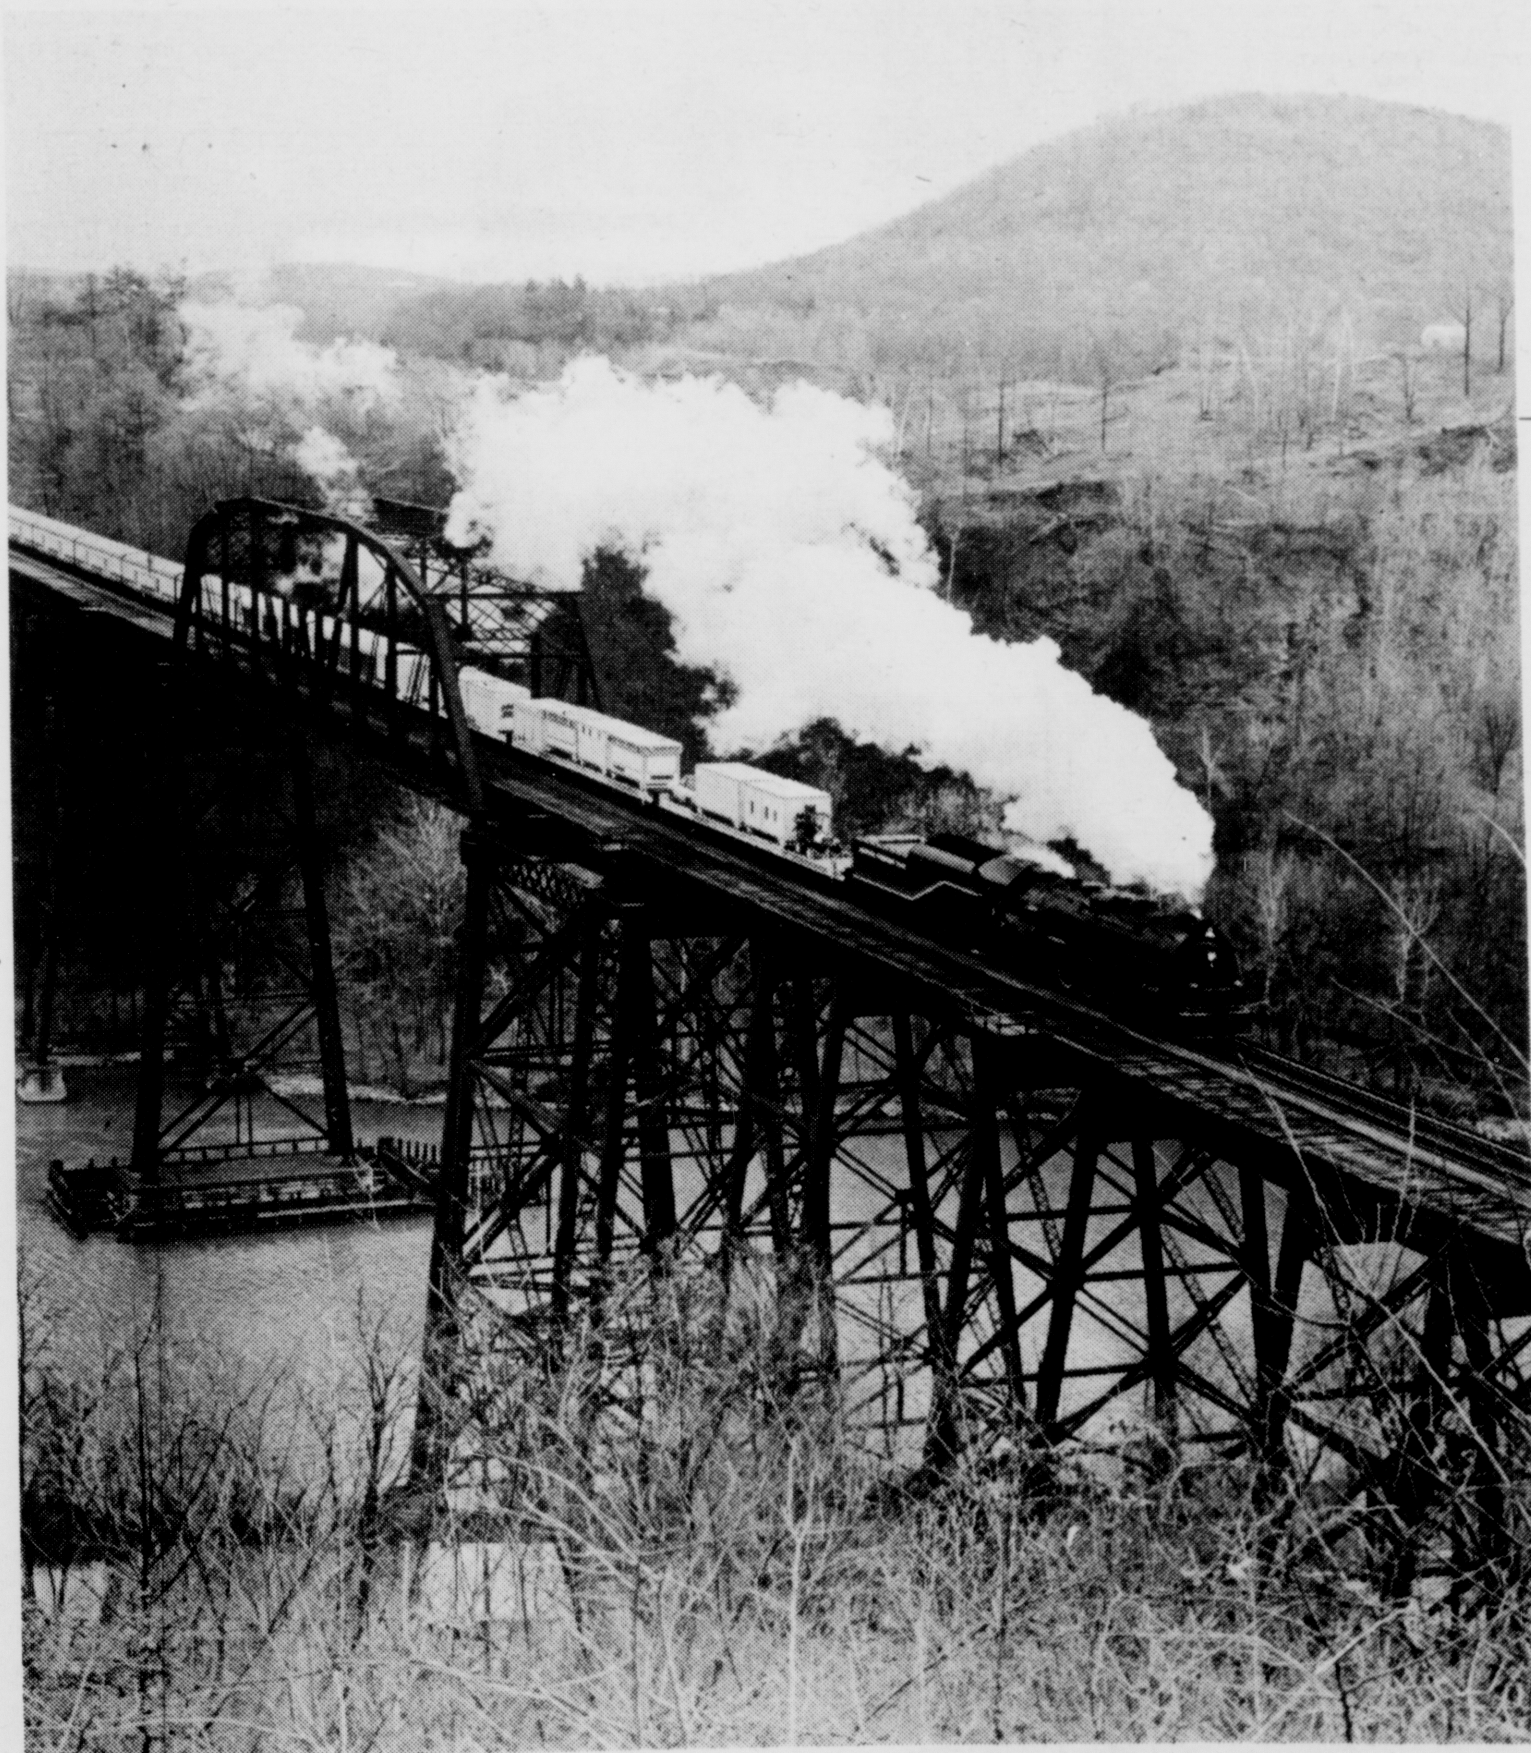

Excitement in Woodstock

Just Asking:

Gasoline Price Hike

Fonda Family:

In Patriotic Move

Onteora Lions' Bavarian Fest In Woodstock On August 17

Like to try putting a little bit of Germany into your life style.

If the answer is in the affirmative you won't have to dash down to New York, board a ship or plane and make your way across the Atlantic.

Instead, all you have to do is start that car in the backyard and head out of Kingston up Route 28 to Route 375.

This will bring you to Woodstock and the Andy Lee Field where on Sunday, August 17, from 1 in the afternoon until 7 at night you'll be part of a fun crowd attending the fourth annual Woodstock Bavarian Festival.

This popular community event is sure to please the whole family — young and old alike. Again this year it is being sponsored by the Onteora Lions Club, a small, but dynamic group of 14 men.

These Lions, headed by Mike Mazanek, president, have again gone all out this year to bring all their patrons a full day of activities and great food.

Mike Mazanek, in announcing plans for this year's festivities, said "our service activities were not as expensive as those of last year but we still cover the five areas of sight, youth, senior citizens, community improvement and ecology." He added that one additional major service this year was the glaucoma-diabetes clinic held in April.

All of these major aims of the Onteora Lions will be greatly enhanced through funds at this year's event.

Of course, there will be recorded German music, plus live music by that great favorite, "Papa Bear," and the Die Bergvagabunden Schuhplattler Dancers. There also will be an adult Bavarian dance contest and a children's Bavarian costume contest as well as games and pony rides for the small fry.

It goes without saying that good food is always the hallmark of these Bavarian Festivals. Those thirst and hunger pains can be taken care of nicely by visiting the food concession catered by Bob Schneller and Manny Froehlich where you'll find such delights as knockwurst, bratwurst, bauerwurst, salads, German cheese and bread and of course, Lawenbrau beer.

And if you're worried about the weather — don't. The Onteora Lions look ahead in planning these late summer events. The August 17 festival will be held rain or shine — thanks to a giant tent with enough seating accommodations inside for some 500 persons.

A visit to Andy Lee Field up in Woodstock on August 17 should prove to be a delightful experience while at the same time aiding a fine service organization and its goals.

PART OF THE CROWD AT BAVARIAN FEST

THAT'S A TALL ONE

The fourth annual Woodstock Bavarian Festival scheduled August 17 at the Andy Lee Field will again help the small, but dynamic group of Onteora Lions to continue its key area of community involvement — sight, youth, senior citizens, community improvement and ecology. And the late summer event will be held rain or shine—with a giant tent providing seating accommodations for a at least 500 persons. Be in Woodstock on this date anytime from 1 in the afternoon until 7 at night for a day long to be remembered.

ON THE DANCE FLOOR IN WOODSTOCK

Just Asking:

"Has the recent hike in gasoline prices — and the probability of further increases — effected or changed your vacation plans this year?"

GLORIA ARMSTRONG, "In our particular case, it has changed nothing really. We insulated our house this year, and that's why we're not going on vacation. Because of the insulation costs, and the high oil prices, we're not vacationing this year."

MARA MACDONALD, Woodstock: "I'm not going on vacation this year and wasn't planning on taking one anyway. But, no, if I hadn't stayed home to work on the house and—after considered thought—it wouldn't have effected me. If gasoline cost 90 cents, it would change my plans, but not at its present price. Last year, everybody panicked; this year no one cares. It's just part of the times."

JOE VIDAL, Hurley: "No way does it effect me! It can't! I'm taking off for the Adirondacks soon. And, if you've got a week off and you want to take the kids to an amusement park somewhere, you're gonna go, that's all. How can it effect you, even though your car uses high test and the price has gone up?"

C.W. BEDERSEN, Krumville: "It has and will have no effect at all on my vacation. I've just made up my mind I have to live with it—and adjust my economic life accordingly."

HERB KLETSKE, Kingston: "Oh, no, no change in plans for me. If I want to go, I'll go. That's all there is to it. I always take a couple of weeks and I always go far away—almost always to Florida."

DORIS KAPLAN, Kingston: "I think people who would normally take a riding vacation would change their plans. I know I would. I don't vacation that way personally, but if I was considering a traveling vacation by car, I would certainly change my plans."

Tremper Strikes a 'Rock'

By Capt. William O. Benson

Today it is difficult to visualize the large number of steamboats that once plied the waters of the Hudson River. Prior to World War I, almost every city and village along the river was served by one or more steamboats. The coming of the automobile and motor trucks, together with the paved highways along the river banks they brought in their wake, changed all this and ended forever the era of the steamboat.

One steamboat service that today is all but forgotten was one that ran between Newburgh and Albany. With a steamer in each direction, landings were made at almost every city and village that bordered the river, providing daily freight and passenger service.

The Newburgh to Albany service was started way back in the 1850's by Captain Jacob H. Tremper of Kingston. Two steamboats operated on the line until the fall of 1918 and then one steamer struggled on alone for ten years more, the service finally coming to a close in early December 1928.

During the season of 1913, the service was being operated by the steamboats "M. Martin" and the "Jacob H. Tremper." The "Tremper" had been built for the line in 1885 and the accident that befell her that year, strangely, was the only accident of note in her long career of 43 years of continuous service. Stranger still, the accident occurred on a summer's morning in broad daylight.

On that Monday morning, July 21, 1913, the "Tremper" was paddling her way up river to Albany between Poughkeepsie and Rondout. As he was in the habit of doing when bucking an ebb tide, the pilot took the "Tremper" up the east channel between Esopus Island and the east shore. Staying a little too close to the east shore, the "Tremper" struck a large rock a few feet beneath the surface. She immediately began to fill and sink. The captain set his course for the mud flats off Staatsburgh where she fetched up on the bottom, partially submerged.

When the news of the accident reached Rondout, William Bell, an official of the Central Hudson Steamboat Company who by that time were the owners of the steamer, set out for the scene on the tugboat "Harry" of the Cornell Steamboat Company.

When the "Harry" came alongside the stricken "Tremper," Mr. Bell climbed aboard and said to the pilot, "For heaven's sakes, what ever happened? It wasn't foggy this morning or anything."

The pilot, as the result of the mishap, was naturally somewhat excited and replied, "I really don't know myself Mr. Bell. I always went up this way before. The only thing I can think of it was a floating rock we hit."

Despite the "Tremper's" encounter with one of nature's wonders, she was a tough old girl and was raised, repaired and continued in service until the end of the line some 15 years later.

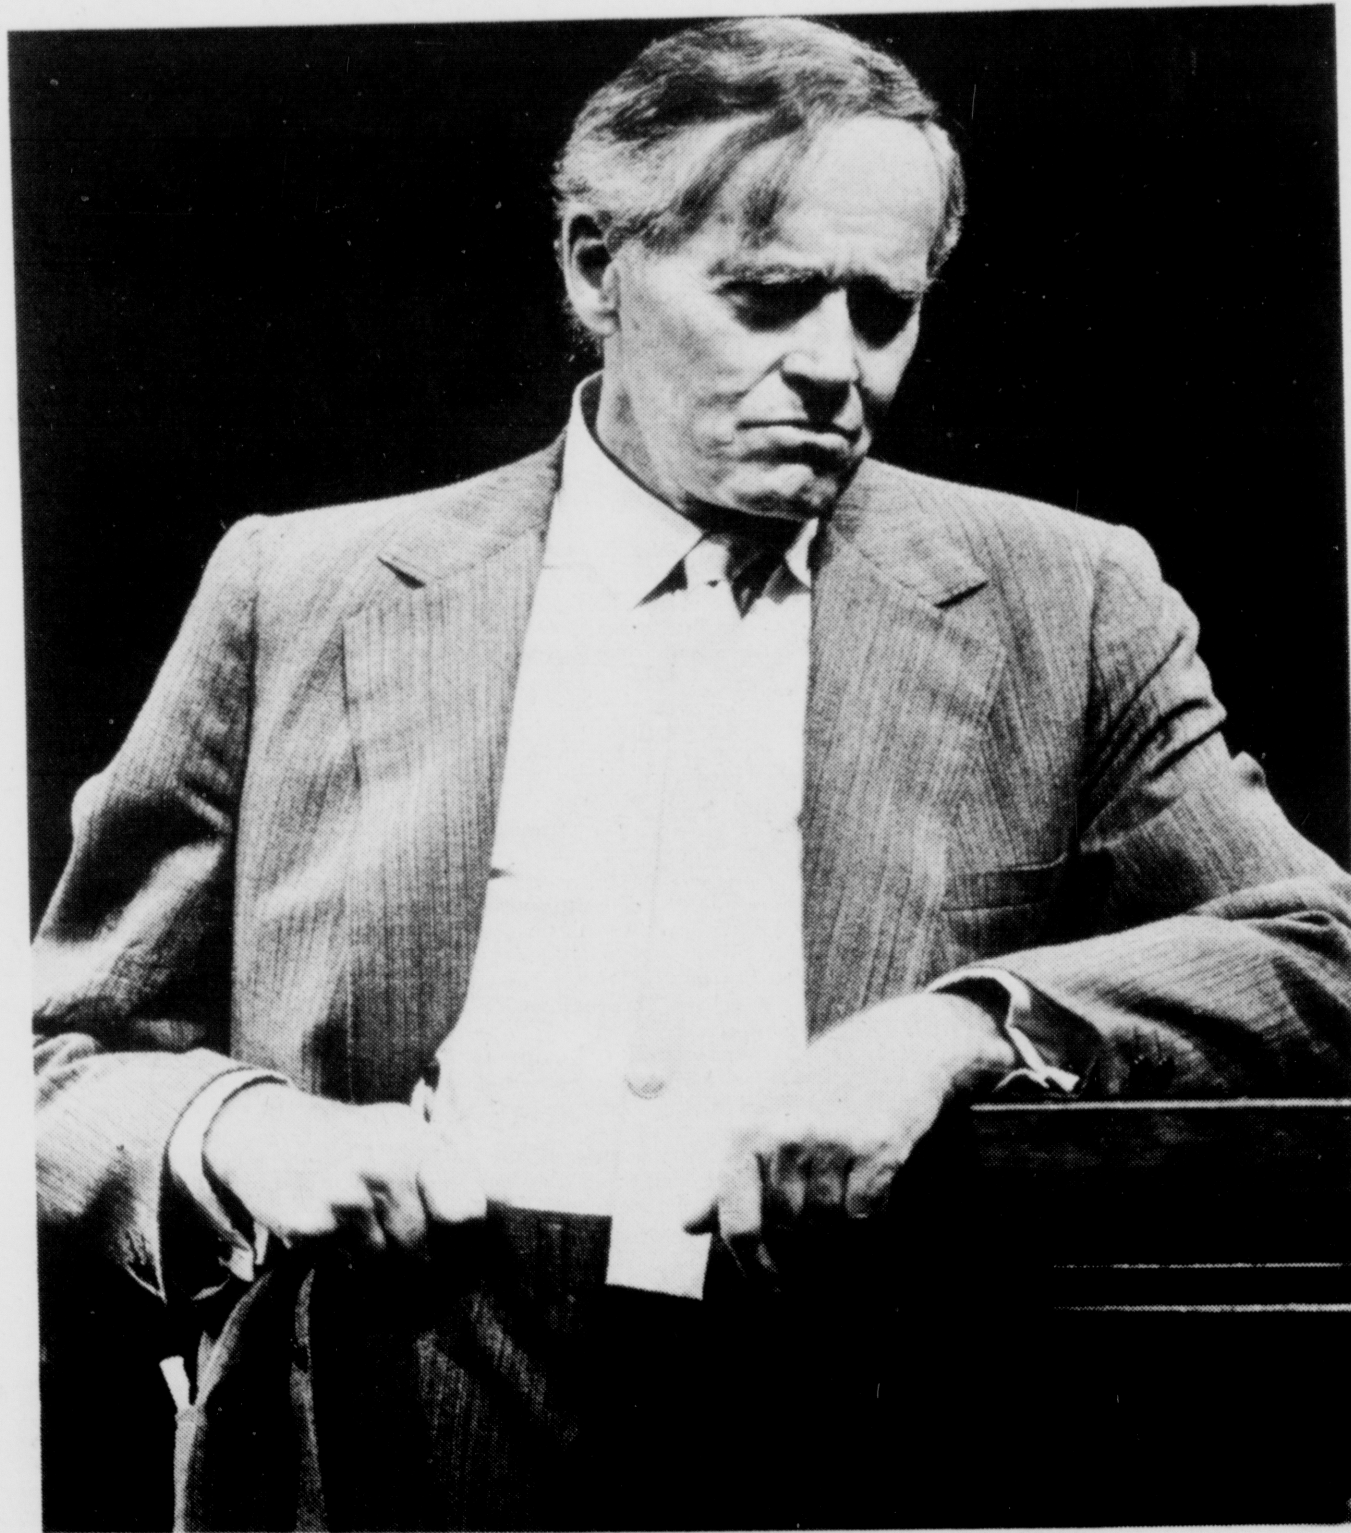

The Tugboat 'Harry'

The Cornell tugboat "Harry" which carried company officials to the scene of the "Tremper's" accident on July 21, 1913. The "Harry" was similar but not identical to the tugboats "Frank" and "Rob," all three of which were named after three of the six sons of S. D. Coykendall, for many years president of the Cornell Steamboat Company.

Hank, Jane and Peter in Bicentennial Movie

Fonda on His Family . . . Enormously Patriotic

Fonda awed by the rebellion of his offspring. Parental love and admiration shine in his face when he talks of Jane and Peter.

FONDA IN CLARENCE DARROW ROLE

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Henry Fonda, 70, is proud of his rebellious son and daughter, and plans to costar with Jane and Peter in a bicentennial year movie of the Revolutionary War. Fonda thinks of his family as enormously patriotic. He recalled the other day that his forebears were colonial patriots and rebels who fought the British.

Fonda's family tree is fascinating.

The name Fonda is Italian. In the 13th and 14th century they lived in the Genoa area. They immigrated to Holland in the 15th century, doubtless as the result of some form of rebellion.

"We were in the Netherlands for more than 100 years," Fonda said at the end of a work day in Universal's "Midway," in which he plays Adm. Chester A. Nimitz.

"We picked up a lot of Dutch first names, and some of them still can be found among the Fondas in this country. Our family settled in upper New York state in 1628 and founded the little town of Fonda.

"It's still there. And people named Fonda continue to live in the town, although I've never visited the place.

"Some members of the Fonda family were scalped by Indians and fought in the Revolution. It's all been documented, but I don't pay too much attention to that."

Henry was born in Nebraska where his grandfather had led a branch of the clan west from New York.

The Fondas are even immortalized in "Drums Along the Mohawk" by Walter E. Edmonds, who researched his story of Indians and colonial settlers in the early days of American history.

"Now Jane and Peter and I are close to making a movie about the Revolution," Fonda said enthusiastically. "Columbia Pictures wants to produce it. The money's there and now it's a matter of a finished script.

"Jane wanted to do a story about the Revolution which isn't in the textbooks. Her husband, Tom Hayden, took the idea to an historian friend who did the research.

"It's the story of a father and his son and daughter. It doesn't involve battles and war. It tells what happened to three people from the beginning of the Revolution to the end.

Actress-activist Jane Fonda chats with ex-hooker Margo St. James (R) prior to second annual Hookers Convention in San Francisco. Margo is chairmadam of COYOTE, an organization of prostitutes opposed to California laws against the world's oldest profession.

(UPI)

"Jane sold the idea to Columbia all by herself. The studio put up the money for a script which is being written now. The 125-page treatment was history, not drama. But, of course, that will be straightened out."

Fonda said he is awed by the rebellion of his offspring. Parental love and admiration shine in his face when he talks of Jane and Peter.

"Jane is the best actress in the world," he stated flatly. "When I saw 'Klute' I shook my head and asked how she did it. Her best scene was improvisation. I can't improvise at all. If I don't have words to work with I can't act.

"I'm in awe of her not only as an actress but as a political activist. I can't be an activist. Both kids are extroverts. I'm an introvert.

"Fortunately I'm an actor. When I play a role I put on a mask and become an extrovert on the stage or in front of a camera as somebody else. I get things off my chest that way.

"I can be funny or smart or interesting—which ain't me at all. I was scared the first time I stepped on a stage. But as long as I can play someone else it's good therapy for me.

"To this day I die inside making personal appearances without a character to hide behind. It's torture for me to accept an award or anything in public and even say 'Thank you.'

"Jane can get up and ad lib for two hours and hold an audience spellbound. She's a brilliant woman."

Hank is equally proud of Peter who telephoned him recently from South Africa where he is working on location.

"He's found a script he wants me to do with Jimmy Stewart," Hank said. "Peter asked me years ago if I'd ever be willing to work for him. I said sure. Evidently he asked Jimmy Stewart the same thing.

"It's possible he could direct us both in this comedy western he has in mind. And that would suit me just fine, too, if the script is good."

There was a twinkle of pride in Henry Fonda's eyes. His kids may not be conventional, but clearly they are the joy of his life.

Lovely and talented Olivia Newton-John is having fair days of late. The popular pops vocalist, who recently appeared at the Saratoga Fair, has another one upcoming — tomorrow and Tuesday at the Garden State Arts Center in Holmdel, N.J. Olivia has been busy recording a new album in London for the past couple of months, prior to her July concert engagements. Her single of Please Mr. Please is currently third on the charts.

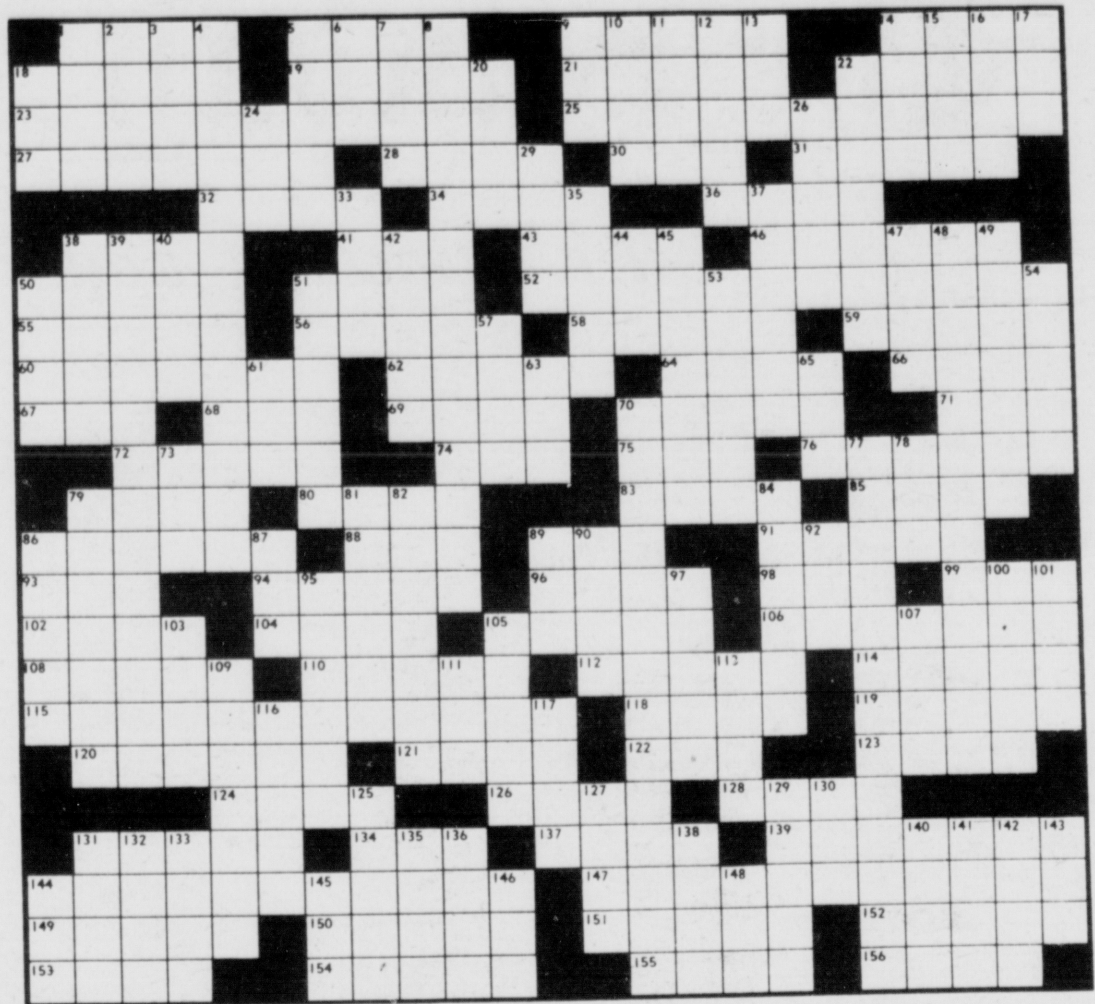

Singer John Denver is doing exciting things these days. For one, he has been appointed a member of the President's Advisory Committee on the resettlement of Vietnamese refugees in the U.S. And for another, Denver will be co-billed with ole blue eyes himself, Frank Sinatra, for a week's engagement at Harrah's, Lake Tahoe, August 1-7. The club's switchboard has been flooded with calls for reservations for the unprecedented duo appearance.

POTPOURRI

By JOAN L. WOINOSKI

It was Hawaiian Luau time again a week ago Saturday at Jewish Community Center's Campsite on Hurley Mt. Road. The site looked like a flashback from "Lost Horizon." The pavilion is set all by itself on top of a pint-sized mountain; sweet corn, salads, fruits, ka-bobs made up the feast; Charlie Lee provided the music; multi-colored gowns and floral shirts took care of decor. One gent in bright yellow pants looked like a 150 lb. bumble bee.

Sandy and Massie Mehl must be taking dance lessons; don't know how far they've gotten, but one thing's for sure: Massie's math isn't too great; he sounded like a broken record mumbler all night: "one-two-three, one-two-three." Marvin and Sabina Millens don't believe in doin' things by halves; they came dressed alike. Garbed in fluorescent fuchsia outfits, like Lex Barker and Dottie Lamour in a South Sea Island flick, they looked like a (handsome) pair of fireflies aglowin' in the dark.

Sheriff Tom Mayone and Carol were there, as well as Ira and Lorraine Trast, Sally Basch, Moe and Anne Schwartz, Bobbi and Steve Conti, Hy and Thelma Rosenberg. Buster Ferraro's missus was tan as a fawn and looked stunningly "native."

As for the "Sids," they were the life of the party. Sid Spiegel stepped in at the drums and pounded his heart away. Sid Samuels' daughter-in-law-to-be gave a belly dance demonstration. Then, lo and behold, Sid Rafalowsky took to the floor and gave his own version!

Now it can be told. One of the most beautiful hide-a-way spots in this area just opened for business. It's Mountain Lake Manor, the former Camp Unity at First Binnewater in Bloomington. A more secluded site would be hard to find. Lots of fresh air, boating, fishing, two pools for swimming and, would you believe, 47 buildings on the property. Owners are still workin' at fever-pitch; come August famed ballet artist Alexis Dolinoff and a whole troupe of ballet dancers will pirouette on the scene.

The Ed Wetterhahns, the Tom Wickmans, the Harry Spiegels, and Ron Smith were among the patrons enjoying dinner one recent Saturday night at Kingston's newest eating establishment—Kingston Manor House, the former Hotel Kirkland.

Mirrored walls, beige decor, green carpeting, brown linen, glowing candlelight all add up to elegance in simplicity. Valet parking provided an extra touch of class.

As for food, Chef Desi introduces a unique concept in homemade Continental and American dining. Briefly, entrees include filet mignon, stuffed capon breast in wine sauce, lobster, cold seafood plate, surf and turf, King crab legs, stuffed fillet of sole, uniquely prepared by Desi (as seen on ABC TV aboard the late President Kennedy's yacht.)

Speakin' of food, one recent hot July afternoon saw the homemade ice cream festival at Port Ewen Methodist Church. It was like a page out of "The Music Man, what with straw hats, clowns, balloons, and the BEST homemade ice cream we've every tasted. As for its success, it just goes to prove people still enjoy the simple things in life. Why that committee was takin' in money faster than it can be printed!

Raymond Burr . . . Ironsides on the Move

NEW YORK (UPI) — Raymond Burr was in New York City for a couple of days on business and to see some Broadway shows before taking off for Lisbon, then England, where he'll film segments of a television special, "The Inventing of America," which he's cohosting with British TV personality James Burke.

After that, Burr has plans for television, movie and stage projects. He's not a man who likes to be caught between engagements. A nine-year run as TV's formidable Perry Mason was quickly followed by eight years as San Francisco detective Chief Robert Ironside. There was also an outstanding performance as Pope John XXIII in an acting career that spans more than four decades and includes at least 100 movies and 200 plays.

It wasn't until 1957 that Burr became a household name as Perry Mason, a role he seemingly has a copyright on. Another actor, Monte Markham, tried to revive the famous TV detective a couple of years ago and flopped. By that time, of course, Burr had long since reestablished himself as Chief Ironside. Now that role, too, has met its inevitable demise, but Burr isn't about to bemoan the loss.

"We had already decided to quit 'Ironside' at the end of last year," he says. "As a matter of fact the last six shows were not expected to be shot. We were going into another show on Fiji in the South Pacific."

Co-owner of an island in the Fiji chain, Burr had long-standing plans to initiate a new TV series there. He makes it clear that it was to have been a distinct departure from his law enforcement series.

"I was going to be a kind of man for all seasons," says Burr, "a writer who sails his boat to Fiji either to retire or take a sabbatical. He meets a young fellow in trouble who's starting a newspaper and the two of them sort of team up. They would maintain separate identities and there would be two story lines."

Don Galloway, Burr's "Ironside" costar, was all set to play the young newspaperman.

"Don and his family were going to move down there," says Burr. "They have visited me in Fiji and they love it."

But the Fiji project had to be abandoned, temporarily at least, because of poor planning.

"There's still a possibility of our doing that," he says. "But I would say that at the moment it's remote. There's a doctor series which is very much alive and also another project."

Is he considering another law enforcement show?

"If I had anything to do with the law any longer I wouldn't want it to be in a show with episodes running only 50 minutes. There's no chance for character development with a show that moves that rapidly. I'd want a longer show with the opportunity for better scripts and better characters."

Burr's future plans include dramas about famous men he holds in great esteem.

"I'm going to do a motion picture about Pope John," he says. "But that's at least four years in the future. It's being researched now, but the amount of work is tremendous. And I expect to do a TV drama in which I'll play Earl Warren."

Burr was a personal friend of Warren, the late chief justice of America's Supreme Court, a controversial figure in America's civil rights movement.

Burr believes that television, although primarily an entertainment medium, owes it to viewers to keep up with the latest trends.

"You're lost if you don't keep up," he says. "Things change so fast today. Take the hippie movement of the 1960s, for instance. What happened to all the hippies?"

Burr is quick to point out that one aspect of the hippie culture has proved profitable for him.

"I'm in the flower business," he says. "I raise orchids and cut flowers in the Azores and Fiji. And nowadays there's a great rage for green plants. Everybody's buying them. It all started with the flower children."

Glen Campbell Set At Saratoga Center

SARATOGA

Singer Glen Campbell's personal way with music will be teamed with the down-home Maine humor of rural humorist Jud Strunk, when the popular Campbell returns to the Saratoga Performing Arts Center Aug. 4 at 8:15 p.m.

Campbell, who drew large crowds to the Saratoga Festival when he last appeared there in 1973, came out of the small town of Delight, Arkansas, to delight record buyers and movie and TV audiences. After an early career as a Hollywood studio musician (playing lead guitar for such artists as Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, The Beach Boys, and Merle Haggard), he launched his solo career spectacularly with a Gold Record for his first recording, "Gentle on My Mind." In less time than it takes most people to tune a guitar, Campbell had become a top recording artist with such Top 10 hits as "By the Time I Get to Phoenix," "Wichita Lineman" and "Galveston." With several Hollywood films to his credit, including "True Grit" and "Norwood," and following his own hour-long TV show, he returns to Saratoga at a time when his current song, "Rhinestone Cowboy," is high on the music charts.

Humorist Jud Strunk, who hails from Maine, is also a singer and guitar and banjo player, but has gained fame as a comedian who has appeared on TV, in Las Vegas, and on records. A humorist in the tradition of Will Rogers, he has a large following Tickets in all price ranges for the Campbell-Strunk show at Saratoga are available at the Kingston Ticketron outlet or at the Saratoga Festival box office.

'Tartuffe' At Hamlet

Hamlet Theatre's August production will be the classical 17th century comedy, "Tartuffe" by Moliere, translated by the American poet, Richard Wilbur. Opening night for "Tartuffe" is Friday, Aug. 1, followed by performances on August 2 and 3. The play will continue to run on all consecutive Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings, with the final performance slated for Sunday, Aug. 24. Curtain for all performances is at 8:30 p.m.

Directed by Bob Oon, the play is a beautifully crafted satire that centers around the relationship between two men, one of whom is a naive family man, the other a religious hypocrite. Christopher Humes will play Orgon, the "innocent victim" of Tartuffe, the crafty hypocrite, who will be portrayed by Nick Samstag. The remainder of the cast consists of Carmen Gehring, Leone James, Betty MacDonald, Dolores DiPucchio, Brian Benben, James Decidue, Bob Oon, Lionel Sacks, Kristin Sinclair, and Alan Croce.

Reservations may be made by contacting the Hamlet Theatre, located on Route 28-A, West Hurley. Special rates will be offered for groups, senior citizens and students.

Hamlet Theatre will hold open auditions for its October production of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" on Saturday, Aug. 2 at 11 a.m.; Sunday, Aug. 3 at 4 p.m.; and Monday, Aug. 4 at 7 p.m.

$4,000 Grant

David Martin of Woodstock has received a $4,000 grant from the Elizabeth T. Greenshields Memorial Foundation in Montreal, Canada. This painting, an oil on canvas, entitled Time Passes Slowly, was the basis of his being selected for the grant this year. This art work and others by Martin may be viewed at the Desmond-Weis Gallery, opposite the Woodstock Playhouse. The gallery is open daily from 11 to 5 p.m., except Tuesdays and on Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m.

An Award for Winter Evening

Bruce Currie of Woodstock has received the Edgar A. Whitney Award of $250 for his painting, Winter Evening, during the 108th annual exhibition of the American Watercolor Society. Another Woodstock artist, Ethel Magafan, exhibited her work, Across the Meadow. This painting will be reproduced in full color in a book soon to be published by Watson-Guption Publications, Master Class in Watercolor by Edward Betts. The exhibition was held at the National Academy of Design galleries in New York.

Paul Hastings is a tower of strength as he lifts Sis Hopkins, portrayed by Debbi Curl, during a recent rehearsal for the Driftwood Floating Theatre's next production, "Sis Hopkins." (Freeman photo)

Happy Family Comedy

"Sis Hopkins," a delightful family comedy of a country girl who becomes a lady when educated in the big city, will make its gala debut July 29 for a three-week engagement aboard the Driftwood Floating Theatre Showboat, it was announced today by Showboat Capt. Edward C. Furbush.

Actors and actresses aboard the Showboat are awaiting production of "Sis Hopkins" with a special excitement. And for good reason: the play is owned by the theatre's special consultant, Miss Mary Ann Dentler, who purchased it for herself as a starring vehicle for Broadway production in the 1920's.

While working on board the Showboat, Miss Dentler found the cast for her show and a new "Sis" in the person of a young actress from nearby Saugerties, Miss Debbi Curl. Working with Capt. Furbush, the Showboat director plans to produce the show, with th Captain, a veteran of many years aboard the great showboats on the American rivers, making his return to the floating stage as the proud and doting father of "Sis."

"Sis Hopkins" is a show with something for everyone," Capt. Furbush said. "There are plenty of laughs, a few tears, with songs and lively dance numbers throughout. And because this show means so much to the entire company, we've pulled all the stops to make this another unforgettable evening on the river."

"Along with members of our resident acting company," Capt. Furbush added, "we've engaged some extremely talented actresses from the greater Kingston area in supporting roles. And, as is traditional Showboat fare, there'll be vaudeville between the acts, along with the shenanigans of our candy pitchman, Tom McGuire."

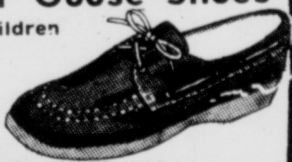

Currently in production aboard the "Drifty" is the rip-snorting melodrama, "Timber," or "On the Trail to the Ozarks," which ends today. Good seats are still available for the new production through Abram's Music Store, uptown Kingston, or at the Driftwood Floating Theatre Showboat box office.

'At the Junction'

Brenda Bufalino "At the Junction" with Andy Wasserman, presenting a new work incorporating songs seldom heard but remembered, will be the next attraction at the Dancing Theatre, located at 6 North Front Street in New Paltz.

This song and dance theater for travelers will feature Brenda Bufalino on August 2 during an 8:30 o'clock performance.

Advanced tickets may be obtained at the Handmade, 6 North Front Street in New Paltz.

Landscape photograph of Bloomington woods taken by Tom Miner.

Art Trio

A three-person show opened Saturday and will continue through August 8 at the Artists' Co-op, Parnassus Square Gallery, 2 Lower Byrdcliffe Road, Woodstock.

Featured are the watercolors of Lila Marcus, whimsical porcelain creatures and drawings by Norman Bacon, and landscape photographs by Tom Miner. The three artists have joined together their efforts in this exhibit to present three complementary, yet contrasting views of the world surrounding us, both the real one, as in the case of Ms. Marcus and Mr. Miner, and the imaginary through the work of Mr. Bacon.

The Artists' Co-op, a non-profit cooperative now in its second year, has worked to become a creative force in the Woodstock area, both through the exhibited works of its members and also by way of the entertainment and cultural events that it has sponsored during the past year. Concurrent with the present and following exhibits is a regular schedule of events, particulars of which can be obtained by either visiting or contacting the gallery.

Show hours are 1 to 6 p.m., except Mondays. All works exhibited are for sale except where specifically noted otherwise by the artist.

LOCAL PRACTITIONER TO TEACH NUTRITION COURSE AT U.C.C.C.

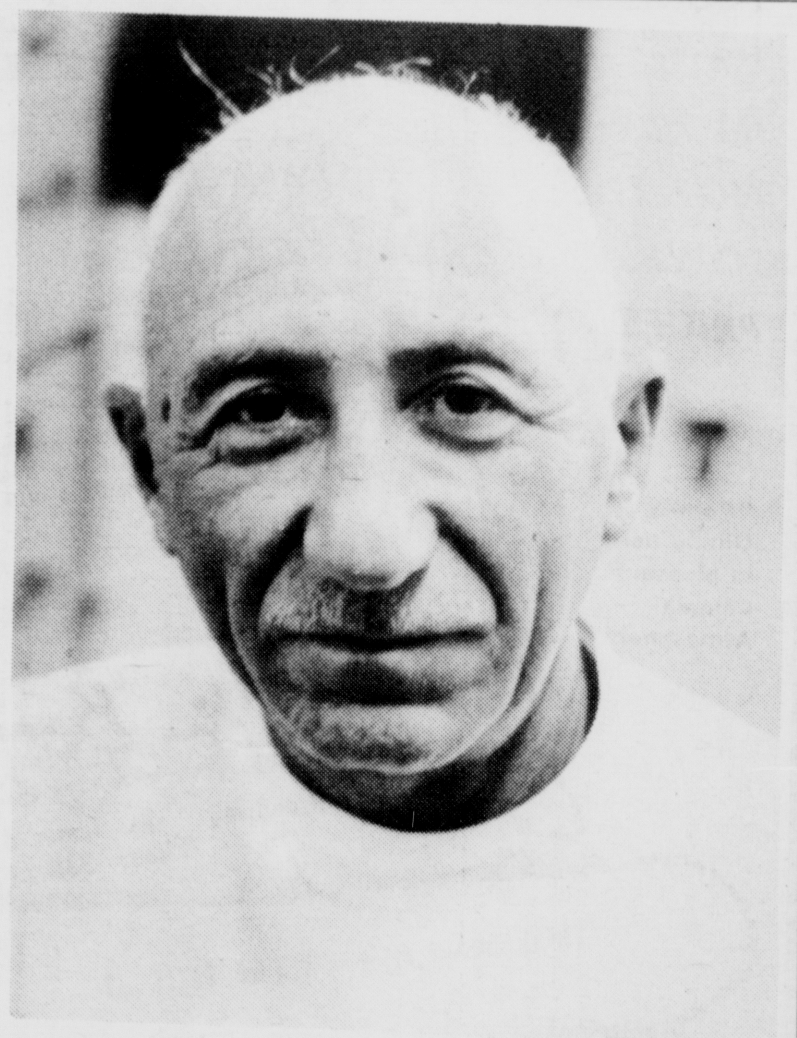

A comprehensive adult course in nutrition and natural foods will be taught this fall at Ulster County Community College in Stone Ridge. Dr. J. Soltanoff of Route 28, West Hurley, an authority on nutrition, health foods, vitamins, exercise, acupuncture and all aspects of natural health will teach the course.

In making this announcement Dr. Soltanoff stated: "Every thinking individual wants to enjoy optimum health, to retain the vigor of youth, the tirelessness of adolescence and the feeling of exhilaration that a sound mind and body produces. Good health assumes more than freedom from illness. It is predicated upon correct nourishment, fresh air, adequate rest, cleanliness, proper exercise, a sound and positive mental attitude and the avoidance of all habits which devitalize and debilitate the body. Each of these basic necessities in turn aids the others. For example, correct nutrition not only contributes to sound sleep and better emotional health but also to optimum muscle tone when combined with adequate exercise. A proper understanding of these fundamental truths and a practical application of their principles will make almost anyone a healthier and happier individual and a more efficient member of society."

Dr. Soltanoff is a prominent chiropractor, a member of the New York Academy of Sciences and the American Institute for Nutritional Research. Before semi-retirement to West Hurley, he practiced for many years in the Greenwich Village section of Manhattan. Among his patients have been author Norman Mailer, folk singers Bob Dylan, John Hammond, Judy Collins, actors Hugh Marlowe and Andy Robinson, drummer Buddy Rich, actresses Faye Dunaway, Viveca Lindfors, dancer Carolee Schneeman and former light heavyweight champion Jose Torres.

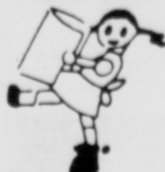

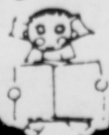

He was also instrumental in instituting free chiropractic care in Union contracts for many thousand of Teamster Union members (locals #807 and #707) in metropolitan New York and Northern New Jersey.

Here come the junior usher, junior bridesmaid, flower girl and ring bearer!

Maybe you are going to be in a wedding soon, since August is a very big wedding month.

Many weddings these days are being held outside. Some couples are writing their own ceremony rather than reciting one from a book.

In some weddings, the ushers wear pastel colors such as aqua, yellow and light blue. Many bridesmaids wear flowered dresses. All-white weddings where even the groom wears white are popular.

Flower girls walk in front of the bride and scatter flower petals down the aisle.

Ring bearers, always boys, carry small white pillows with the rings pinned on them to make certain that they do not fall off.

Junior bridesmaids walk down the aisle by themselves or with another bridesmaid. They dress just like the older bridesmaids.

Junior ushers help seat the guests. They offer the ladies their right arm as they escort them down the aisle to their seats.

A bride shows her ring to two flower girls and the ring bearer.

Meet Laura Baugh

"How's your love life, Laura Baugh?"

Have you seen this commercial on TV? The beautiful girl in it is the number one attraction on the Ladies Professional Golf Tour. The Mini Page talked with her recently.

Q. When did you start playing golf?

A. "I hit my first ball when I was two, started playing at three, and won my first tournament at the age of five. Golf was a family thing with us. My two older brothers play, too."

Laura Baugh

Laura was national Pee Wee golf champion. She also won the Junior World title in 1970 and the U.S. Amateur title in 1971. This is her third year as a pro. In 1974 she won a total of $37,000. She makes a lot more money endorsing products. She just turned 20 years old.

Q. What are your other interests?

A. "I design golf outfits for the same sportswear people that Billy Jean King designs tennis dresses for. I do commercials and travel a lot, especially to Japan."

Laura is a national idol in Japan. She is recognized everywhere she goes.

Q. How's your love life?

A. "I really don't have time to date. It's hard to meet men at a tournament. I'm looking for someone who will be a serious friend in the future. I want to meet someone who's really interested in me."

Healthy Horse Twins

See the unusual twin baby horses. They were four days old when this picture was taken. One is a colt or a boy horse. One is a filly or girl horse. Not many twin horses live. These are healthy and doing well. These are Appaloosa horses. They have spots on them.

Guess Why?

Guess why the number 13 is thought to be unlucky!

This superstition goes back to ancient mythology. The story was that the gods were having a party. Twelve guests were invited. Thirteen gods showed up. The uninvited god was evil.

Guess why X is used as a symbol for a kiss.

Many years ago, people who could not write their names would sign an X. Sometimes they would kiss the X to show that they were really sincere about what they signed.

Mini Jokes

The Colonial Times

In Virginia, there was the unusual custom of "throwing the stocking." After the wedding ceremony, the bride would get into bed. The bridesmaids would turn around with their backs to the bed, and, standing at the foot, would take off one of their stockings and throw it at the bride. The first one to hit her would be the next to marry. The groomsmen would do the same thing to the groom.

Wedding Customs.

Years Ago

Today

Today, there are many wedding customs. How they got started is sometimes a mystery. Experts don't always agree, but here are some ideas that date back hundreds of years ago!

In early history, the groom would take along his best friend to help him capture the bride. Of course, he would want to pick the very best man possible.

Carrying the bride over the threshold or doorway probably goes back to the custom of capturing the bride. Since she might be going against her will, the groom would have to carry her.

He would have to hide her away from her relatives, who might come after her, so this is how the first honeymoon began.

He would also want to keep who she was a secret, so he would cover her up. This is how use of the wedding veil started.

Anniversary Gift Scramble-le do

It is the custom to give gifts made of special things on certain wedding anniversaries. For example, you should give the married couple silver on their 25th anniversary. Below we have scrambled the type of gift next to the anniversary they are to be given. Can you unscramble them?

Mini Do: Designs on Burlap

You'll need:

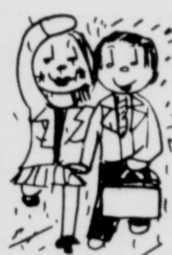

- Burlap. This is a fabric with a very big weave.
- A big needle
- Knitting wool of many colors
- Scissors
- Chalk

1. Draw your design in chalk.
2. Using a running stitch, go over it. Add felt flowers if you wish.
3. To make a wall hanging, make about a one inch hem at the top and bottom. Run sticks through. Add a string at the top.

More Customs

Throwing rice at a couple is an ancient Chinese custom. Rice is an old symbol used to wish couples lots of children. It has another meaning—good wishes for kitchen shelves full of plenty to eat. In this country, we do it just for fun. Sometimes people throw confetti. Some Europeans throw fresh fruits, such as figs!

At the end of a Jewish ceremony, the groom steps on a glass and breaks it as a symbol of the destruction of the ancient temple in Jerusalem in the year 70.

A bridal shower is a party for the bride where the guests bring gifts. It is believed that this custom started in Holland when friends "showered" a bride with presents when her family did not approve of the groom and would not give her anything.
